Berserk Gunman Kills 5 Persons

6 Others Wounded; Killer Hunted In N.J. Woods

Man, 26, Reported Carrying Tommy Gun, Escapes in Green Ford Sedan

VINELAND, N. J., Nov. 17 (AP).—Five people were killed tonight by a berserk gunman identified by New Jersey State Police as Ernie Inganito, about 26.

At least six others were reported wounded in the tragic shootings in Piney Hollow, a farm and scrub pine section of South Jersey.

Reports coming in from State police throughout South Jersey described the gunman as married and separated from his wife. At the Malaga station, officials said they were unable to explain the reason for the killings.

Carries Sub-Machinegun

The crazed gunman was armed with a Thompson sub-machinegun, one State barracks reported, and was on the loose somewhere in the wooded section of the area. He made his escape in a green, four-door Ford sedan, 1941 model.

Malaga officers said the shootings took place at two different scenes, inside and outside a Piney Hollow house and about 2 miles away from the house. Victims included the slayer's uncle and three members of his wife's family.

The dead were identified as Marion Pioppi, 28, John Pioppi, 40, Mike Mazzola, 50, Pearl Mazzola, 45, and Mrs. Theresa Pioppi, age unavailable. Three others were in Newcomb Hospital.

Recalls Unruh Tragedy

The shootings were reminiscent of the September 7, 1949 killing of 13 persons by Howard Unruh in Camden, about 20 miles from the scene of tonight's machine-gunnings. Unruh, a war veteran, now in the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane, turned loose a German Luger on his unsuspecting victims.

Tonight's bizarre affair took place along a section of Harding Highway, near little Piney Hollow in Cumberland County. State police immediately mobilized throughout the State in an intensive search for the killer.

At Newcomb Hospital in Vineland officials reported four of the injured as Mrs. Hilda Mazzola and her husband, Frank; Tessie Intento and an unidentified patient. One of the dead, Mrs. Pearl Mazzola, died in the emergency room of the hospital. The others were killed instantly by the burst of fire.

Off-Duty Police Called

All off-duty policemen were called in and all passes for leaves were cancelled. The police were trying to block all strategic roads over which the killer might be attempting a getaway. The section has many small back roads in farm country. They were described by police as a maze of dirt roads with hunting lodges located along the roadsides.

A later report from another State police source said the escape car had three badly damaged fenders.

Police issued the following description of Inganito: "He is 5 feet tall, about 160 pounds, brown hair and of medium build. He was hatless and wearing a checked suit."

The region being combed by police includes Fort Dix, Bordentown, Toms River, Camden and the South Jersey area from Vineland south to Cape May on the Atlantic Ocean.

Collazo Pleads Not Guilty

Cohen Says He Is Broke And Harassed

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Kefauver Senate Crime Committee heard the Mickey Cohen story today from the Hollywood gambler himself, but learned little.

"I'm the most harassed man in the United States," declared Cohen, who has had five attempts made on his life. He said he has "no idea" why people want to kill him.

"I've spent thousands of dollars trying to find out," said Cohen. "I have nothing. No one could muscle in on me. I just ain't got nothing."

He opened his wallet, showed $285 and said it's all he has.

Not only that, he went on, he's $300,000 in debt and has been borrowing heavily.

Among his creditors, Cohen acknowledged was the late Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, to whom he owed $25,000. Siegel was slain in 1947, and Cohen since has been credited with taking over control of the Southern California gambling empire Siegel had built up.

"Was Siegel a close friend? Cohen was asked. "Very close," the gambler replied.

He explained that he owes sums of from $15 to $35,000, most of which he's obtained without giving notes. "Friendly loans," he called them. But he added: "My credit has gotten a little weak lately."

Cohen, reputed top man in West Coast gambling, went into his finances before the Senate Crime Committee headed by Democrat Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

He objected to doing it, saying he's under investigation by the Internal Revenue Bureau, but Kefauver ordered him to answer the questions.

Committee counsel Rudolph Halley asked him if he's "broke."

"Yes," answered Cohen.

"Do large amounts of money pass through your hands?"

"Money that I borrow, yes."

"About $60,000 last year?"

"Yes."

"What happened to it?"

Cohen said he lost $25,000 of it on a criminal bond put up for Dave Ogul, an associate, in an assault case. Ogul disappeared and Cohen thinks he's dead.

"I'm under harassment from the Los Angeles police, who make it

Senate Group Plans County Crime Inquiry

Senate crime investigators will move into Prince Georges County next week for preliminary review of county crime information in the hands of William R. Hughes, Republican delegate-elect.

Hughes spearheaded a bitter GOP campaign attack on crime conditions in Prince Georges County that helped pave the way for a near-complete Republican sweep in last week's election.

Two crime investigators for the Senate Investigating Committee headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) have arranged to meet Hughes Tuesday.

Among the items of information Hughes said he is prepared to place in the hands of the investigators is a report of an alleged protection payoff incident involving Prince Georges County policemen.

He said information about the incident includes time, place, and names, but cautioned that it is part of the "raw material" for further investigation, rather than a case backed up with evidence.

He stated he has not prepared a report for the investigators, but is ready to turn over to them the information that came to him about crime and gambling in Prince Georges, both during the

Chickens Blow Up After Eating Bits Of Junked Carbide

LUENEBURG, Germany, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—An excited farmer told police that a couple of his chickens "exploded with a loud bang" while running across his barnyard. Several other chicken farmers reported the same thing.

Investigation showed the chickens ate bits of carbide left behind by Allied soldiers during fall maneuvers, then drank water. The carbide formed a powerful gas which blew them to bits.

Truman Asks $100 Million To Aid Tito

President Truman's "great concern from a military point of view" that Marshal Tito may be "seriously, if not fatally undermined" by the drought situation has prompted the President to ask a 100 million dollar aid program to prevent famine in Yugoslavia.

This was disclosed yesterday in a telegram sent by the White House to a dozen top congressional leaders of both parties.

Mr. Truman wired the legislators to tell them of his plans for an emergency program of food relief, already underway, and if his intent to request Congress for a straight grant for the additional sums needed later in the winter.

The President, according to a copy of the message made available to United Press Reporter John L. Steele, said he thought that unless measures were taken at once against the prospective famine, "the ability of the Yugoslav military forces to withstand an attack by the USSR or its satellites, or both, would be dangerously weakened."

As previously published in The Washington Post, the interim, emergency program consists of three elements:

1. Release of about eight million dollars of a 15-million-dollar Export-Import Bank loan to Yugoslavia, for food purchases. About 3½ millions have already been made available to buy lard. Some time ago, two millions were used for dried beans and eggs and canned beef.

2. A grant of about 12 million dollars by the Economic Cooperation Administration to Italy and Western Germany, to reimburse them for sending an equivalent amount of flour to Yugoslavia. Activation of this plan was announced by the ECA yesterday.

3. A grant of 10 million dollars or more from Mutual Defense Assistance Program funds, for food for the Yugoslav army. This is contingent on Tito's signing a bilateral agreement with the United States, subscribing to efforts at joint and individual defense under terms of the United Nations charter.

When Congress reconvenes on November 27, Mr. Truman will request it to appropriate the longer-range aid, of about 60 million dollars, as an outright relief grant.

Mr. Truman's telegram was sent to ranking members of the Soviet Backs Lie's Plan on Own Terms

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union indorsed today the idea of a special United Nations Security Council session on major world issues, attended by foreign ministers or heads of governments, as proposed by Secretary General Trygve Lie — provided Communist China got the Chinese seat in such a session.

With the General Assembly moving to take up the 20-year program for peace through U. N. which Lie submitted to Big Four chiefs of state last spring, the Soviet Union tossed a resolution ir to the hopper which would call for Assembly declarations in favor of a half dozen Soviet U. N. policies.

A noncommittal rival resolution offered by nine smaller powers appeared more likely to win adoption. The non-Soviet powers — Canada, Chile, Colombia, Haiti, Lebanon, Pakistan, the Philippines, Sweden and Yugoslavia — proposed simply to commend Lie's "initiative," and to ask appropriate U. N. bodies to take up his various ideas, reporting to the Assembly in September, 1951.

Debate on Lie's 10-point program will probably begin in the Assembly today.

Topping his program has been the idea of a top-level Security Council session as the first of a semiannual series in various parts of the world. His suggestions include efforts to limit the veto in peaceful settlements of disputes, a fresh approach on atomic controls and disarmament, a beginning on a small U. N. force to stop localized conflicts, admission of all nations to the U.N., and work on technical assistance, better living standards, human rights, colonial problems and international law.

The Soviet resolution, which is expected to be pressed by Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, would declare it necessary—in further work on Lie's suggestions—to provide the following:

1. Periodic top-level Security Council sessions "on the understanding that the Council shall function with its full and legal membership with the participation of the representative of the Peoples Republic of China."

2. "Unswerving observance of the principle of unanimity in the work of the Security Council."

3. "The unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons and other weapons for the mass extermination of people, and the institution of controls to insure the observance of that prohibition." (Over Soviet opposition, the Assembly's "peace through deeds" resolution, formally approved in plenary session yesterday, reaffirms support of the majority atomic control plan for United Nations operation of major atomic activities.)

Defenses 'Stripped by Korea'

Bradley Asks Strengthening Of National Guard, Reserves

ATLANTA, Nov. 17 (AP).—Gen. Omar Bradley suggested a sweeping new program today to bulwark the National Guard and other reserves and keep them ever-ready for instant combat.

The Nation's military chief told 500 newspaper executives it is a "bruising and shocking fact" that the Korean war stripped the free world of adequate power to face a general attack at any other point.

To prevent a recurrence, he said, the United States must build its greatest peacetime Army in history but even "bare minimum" military needs will run smack into manpower shortages.

Thus he suggested "we should re-study our entire system of reserves." He proposed increasing enlisted strength of National Guard and reserve units from 50 percent of full strength to 85 or 90 percent.

And every soldier in these divisions should have had two years

Labor Wants Even Higher Profits Tax

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Organized labor yesterday went to bat for the Administration's proposed excess profits tax, but asked that the tax be stiffened to yield up to 7 billion dollars more revenue.

Business witnesses meanwhile continued to berate the special levy and call for alternative forms of taxation, as the House Ways and Means Committee concluded a second day of public hearings.

The almost solid industrial opposition, particularly from firms claiming special hardships, was beginning to leave some impact on the committee.

Although the Democratic majority was plainly determined to bring out an excess profits tax shortly after the "lame duck" Congress convenes November 27, some key members predicted special machinery will be set up to guard against World War II tax inequities.

AFL and CIO witnesses, and a lone spokesman from the left-wing United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (independent), presented the first public testimony in support of the profits tax.

Arthur A. Elder, AFL tax consultant, generally indorsed the 75 percent profits levy recommended by Treasury Secretary John Sny-

Philippines, ECA Sign Agreement on $250,000,000 Aid

NYHT News Service

An agreement for a 250 million dollar economic and technical aid program for the Philippines has been signed by President Elpidio Quirino and William C. Foster, Economic Cooperation Administration chief, now in the Philippines, the ECA announced yesterday.

The Philippines government agrees to:

1. Increase taxes by January, balance the budget and build a surplus to eliminate deficits and counteract inflation.

2. Set up a minimum wage law for agricultural workers.

3. Accelerate social reforms and economic development.

4. Appoint a Philippine council to work with ECA.

Isolationist Now Extinct, Acheson Says

Secretary of State Acheson last night good-naturedly announced his discovery that the Nation's "isolationists" had been replaced by "a new species of homo sapiens, the re-examinists."

In a thinly disguised dig at the Republican leadership of Senator Robert A. Taft, Acheson said he had learned that the species known as isolationist "has now become extinct."

"They are just as dead as a dodo or a sabertooth tiger," he told some 900 persons attending International Night of the National Council of Negro Women.

'Re-examinist' Defined

Acheson defined the "re-examinist" as one who says that "I want to re-examine all our policies and programs" dedicated to the cause of peace and freedom.

No group is worthy of its leaders if they "want to tear up the very roots of the policy on which the future of the world depends," the Secretary declared.

He led up to his "discovery" by saying: "We are told that it is very rude to refer to anybody as an isolationist, and that it hurts the feelings of people to use that phrase."

In Reply To Taft

Acheson's remarks were obviously in reply to those of Taft on Monday, when the Ohio Senator told a press conference that Congress should "review" the problem of military aid to Western Europe.

Taft added that "anyone who calls another an isolationist in these times is an idiot."

The Secretary told his audience at the interdepartmental Auditorium that it doesn't "make sense" for a national leader to say he wants to "look at this all over again to see whether we should have started on it."

Nation's Role

He went on to emphasize the Nation's role in support of friendly powers and in the United Nations.

"This country has had one overwhelming direction from which it has never varied," he declared.

That aim is "to create and maintain an environment in which the great American experiment in liberty can live and flourish."

If his understanding of a "re-examinist" holds true, Acheson added, "it is very serious."

It means that the person and

Troops Smash Trap Of Reds in Korea, Then Roar North Toward Frontier

SEOUL, Korea (Saturday), Nov. 18 (AP).—A United States tank column smashed a Red trap in frigid northeast Korea Friday and roared northward in a bid to reach the Manchurian border in three or four days.

On other fronts, Allied patrols probed forward two to three miles against little or no opposition.

Behind-the-front war flared in central Korea. Thirty Red guerillas set Kapyong on fire and put its 8000 civilians to flight in chilly weather. Three hours later, reinforced South Korean police drove the raiders out of the town 32 miles northeast of Seoul.

In the northeast, scene of Friday's principal action, two battalions of Communist troops tried to trap a column of tanks and infantry from the United States Seventh Division. The site was a narrow gorge six miles southwest of Kapsan, which is 21 miles south of the Yalu River border between Manchuria and Korea.

128 Reds are Killed

The Americans killed 128 of the machine-gunning Reds in a three-hour battle and sent the rest fleeing. Whether the Reds were Chinese or Koreans was not clear. The Americans suffered some dead and wounded.

Col. Harbert B. Powell, commander of the Seventeenth Regiment, which made the advance, told Associated Press Correspondent Tom Stone he expected to reach the Manchurian frontier in "three or four days."

"We plan to go to the Yalu River then pull back and entrench," he said. "My orders are indefinite.

"But if they fire across the river at us, we'll shoot hell out of them."

American fighter and bomber pilots said Kapsan, the doughboys' immediate objective, was gutted and still burning from two days of air attacks.

The fliers reported no sign of life in the streets. Kapsan was once a marshalling center for Red troops.

An observation pilot from the Seventh Division who flew his little plane along the south bank of the Yalu Friday reported: "I did not see any enemy anywhere."

He said the river was about 200 yards wide at the point the Seventeenth Regiment hoped to reach early next day, and "was iced along the edges."

On the extreme northeast front, the South Korean Capital Division moved ahead 2½ miles to about 5 miles north of Myongchon. The division had been stalled for two days by heavy Red counterattacks that threatened its flanks.

United States warplanes, artillery and naval gunfire helped the Republican division get rolling again.

A United States Tenth Corps spokesman said "the tide has definitely turned" for the Capital Division.

American Marines probed moun-

China Communists Reported Bringing 4-Point Peace Plan

FLUSHING, N. Y., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Rumors circulated without confirmation tonight that Communist China's delegation en route to the United Nations was bringing a four-point plan for the settlement of the Far Eastern crisis. The plan was said to include provisions for:

1. Creation of a "buffer zone" between Manchuria and Korea.

2. Withdrawal of the Seventh United States Fleet from Formosa.

3. Cessation of aid to Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalists.

4. Withdrawal of diplomatic recognition from the Nationalists.

Memorandum for the Postmaster General:

Please have someone check on the whole set-up of the Republicans-For-Roosevelt-League. This is a field which may well be explored intensely.

F. D. R.

This memorandum was occasioned by a letter from Columbus, Ohio, describing the spontaneous establishment of a Republicans-for-Roosevelt-League.

F. D. R. to Norman Hapgood in Petersham, Mass.:
THE WHITE HOUSE,
Aug. 28, 1935.

Dear Norman:

Many thanks for your notes. The Senate Resolution has been much modified and an actual reading of it shows that it takes away little Executive authority except the embargo on certain types of arms and munitions (the type to be determined by me) between now and next February. Discretion must, of course, remain in the Executive in the long run.

Things do look serious in Europe but we have passed so many serious crises during the past few years that I still hope.

Always sincerely,

The Senate joint resolution referred to here directed the President to embargo exports of arms and munitions to all belligerents upon presidential proclamation that a state of war existed between two or more foreign countries.

The Administration had in fact opposed such neutrality legislation. While it favored a system of national supervision and control of the manufacture and traffic in arms and munitions, it felt a mandatory embargo which did not discriminate between aggressor and victim could conceivably render it helpless to prevent war from breaking out.

Isolationist sentiment was so powerful, however, that the Administration decided to go along with the resolution, particularly since the mandatory arms embargo would expire in six months. Moreover, in the developing Italo-Ethiopian conflict the application of the arms embargo would hurt Italy more than Ethiopia.

F. D. R., in approving the resolution, stated, however, "It is conceivable that situations may arise in which the wholly inflexible provisions of Section 1 of this Act might have exactly the opposite effect from that which was intended. In other words the inflexible provisions might drag us into war instead of keeping us out."

F. D. R. to William E. Dodd in Berlin:
THE WHITE HOUSE,
Aug. 14, 1935.

My Dear Dodd:

Many thanks for that interesting letter of yours. I am very glad to have your slant on

$1000 Pay Cut Asked by Green

When a public official asks for a $1000 pay cut—it's news.

That's exactly what Harry K. Green, Arlington Commissioner of Revenue, has done.

Green, a veteran of 31 years at the post, wrote to the Virginia State Compensation Board that illness had kept him away from his office so much this year that he felt he could not accept his full $8500 annual salary.

The commissioner was in a hospital for six weeks after an operation last June, his wife said.

Several years ago, Green asked that his salary be cut and the difference divided among several lower-paid members of his staff.

Said Mrs. Green yesterday: "He's a conscientious sort of a guy."

'Mr. Tash' Assessed $25,000 As Damages in Theft Threat

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Leon A. Tashof—better known as "Mr. Tash"—was assessed more than $25,000 damages yesterday for wrongfully accusing a woman cashier of embezzlement and then coercing her into turning over her family savings.

The award was made by a District Court jury in a suit brought by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Brown, of 312 Rittenhouse st. nw. The defendant is the owner of the New York Jewelry Co., 719 7th st. nw. and live at 2730 Wisconsin ave.

Mrs. Brown, 30, the cashier, said that as a result of actions of Tashof and employes of a bonding company representing him, she was ill in bed for a month and unable to work for two years.

Her suit, brought through Attorneys Dorsey K. Offutt and James M. Bird, disclosed she had been employed by Tashof for five years before April 15, 1948, when he said there was a shortage of $64.50 in her accounts.

At the time, she testified, she was suffering from the result of a broken collarbone and was under the hypnotic effect of a sedative.

According to Mrs. Brown, Tashof and his agents kept her several hours in the store with nothing to eat or drink except Coca Cola. They then announced, she testified, that several thousand dollars were missing.

She accused the defendant of threatening to arrest her.

She said that under the threat,

Chest Reaches 68 Percent, To Continue Three Weeks

It will take another three weeks of campaigning to push the Community Chest area drive to the $4,260,000 quota, Chairman Hugh K. Duffield said yesterday as collections reached 68 percent.

A total of $2,929,695.92 was recorded at four general report meetings of Government, business and special solicitation units in the Willard and Washington Hotels. More than 88,000 persons are still to be provided for as the drive enters its sixth week.

Mrs. Harry Truman, honor guest at the Special Solicitation unit luncheon, presented 11 Red Feather Oscars to outstanding volunteer workers.

Mrs. Herbert H. Freer, president of the board of managers of the Florence Crittenton Home, an agency partially supported by the Chest, said the funds they receive "means the difference between mediocrity and superiority" status in the "shelter of unmarried mothers."

"We are not there to condemn or condone," she pleaded in a brief talk about the charity home. The problem is there and has to be faced, she said.

Mrs. Freer said there had never "been a maternal death at the hospital" because of the superior service Community Chest help enables the home to maintain.

The four collection units reported as follows:

Government—81.49 percent, or $1,371,177.98, of a $1,682,700 quota.

Special solicitation—65.59 percent, or $204,332.97, of a $311,500 quota.

Business I—63.41 percent, or $1,051,925.93, of a $1,658,300 quota.

Peiping Calls U. S. Attitude War-Like

LONDON, Nov. 17 (U.P.)—Communist China's official Peiping Radio charged tonight that the U. S. "had lied and smashed her way across the world to Chinese territory and into it."

The broadcast, monitored here, charged that American leaders began last month to soften up public opinion for invasion of Chinese territory with troops. It declared the United States attitude toward China was "bellicose;" the statements of U. S. leaders a "curtain of lies."

The words "had smashed into Chinese territory," however, appeared to be a reference to Formosa which Red China claims America is trying to take over.

Peiping radio's official spokesman said statement by President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson that United States troops in Korea would respect China's territorial integrity are "not convincing anyone here."

He said, "While Truman is officially reassuring and Acheson is deploring that the Chinese could possibly 'misunderstand' America's pacific intentions, some lesser lights are putting the real line of American policy."

The spokesman then quoted Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) as saying, "The war cannot stop at the Yalu River.

(United Press dispatches on Knowland's statement at Taipei, Formosa, following front line visits in Korea contained no such quotes by the Senator.)

(According to the United Press dispatch from Taipei Knowland opposed suggestions that a 30-mile buffer zone be carved out of North Korea unless a similar 30-mile neutral strip be established on the north side of the Yalu River.)

The National Production Authority yesterday notified the copper and brass industries it had drafted an order curtailing the civilian use of copper. The cut, not announced, reportedly will be 25 or 30 per cent.

of active duty, and be "immediately available in case we are attacked," said the General.

Speaking to the national convention of the Associated Press Managing Editors' Association, Bradley appealed with "urgency" for rearmament embracing the "total resources" of West Germany.

He said the reestablishment of German armed forces is "fearsome for the Frenchman to anticipate," but is necessary to build a "resurgent western Europe . . . one of the great hopes for the defense of freedom."

Lack of agreement with the French on the German question, he said, is the only delay to an integrated defense force in Europe. General Bradley, chairman of the combined United States Chiefs of Staff, is to go to Europe about December 1 to seek a solution with other Atlantic Pact nations.

"Accomplished in the talents of science, we have created the atom bomb," said General Bradley. "Today, we would gladly trade it for a genuine course of righteousness in the world.

"Acknowledged victors in the art of war, we would prefer the benefits of lasting international agreement and tranquillity. Today, we would trade all military power for a century of peace.

"But no easy trades are on the market. We must earn the world righteousness we seek, and the peace we so earnestly desire."

ECA Says Aid To Europe Is Still Needed

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In its most cheerful report on European recovery to date, the Economic Cooperation Administration told Congress yesterday that Marshall Plan aid is nevertheless still necessary as "the vital margin" required for economic support.

In its ninth quarterly report, the ECA said the western European nations must now extend their already sizable economic gains "to assure adequate resources for the rearmament program and the civilian economy."

The report, covering the three months that ended June 30, did not, of course, reflect any of the economic changes that have taken place since the Korean conflict. Neither did it attempt to forecast the amount of future American aid that would be necessary to help accomplish the expanded defense programs, or to indicate whether the aid should continue after the scheduled end of the Marshall Plan in mid-1952.

Gains Must Be Extended

The recently published Gordon Gray report said economic assistance should continue to flow to western Europe, because of the added military burdens, for three or four more years from now.

The ECA study declared the Marshall Plan nations, "under the threat of intensified Communist aggression . . . must maintain and extend their gains. In the period ahead, the economies of the participating countries will have to support a far heavier load.

"As military expenditures rise," the document warned, "pressure to curtail civilian consumption and investment will increase."

Without attempting to forecast the future with any further precision, the report turned to outline a surprisingly encouraging picture of progress of the 18 Marshall Plan countries up until the middle of this year.

Output at Record Peak

Some highlights:

Industrial Production. At an all-time peak, 24 percent higher than before the war, and 28 percent above the level of the period when the Marshall Plan began.

Agricultural Output. For the first time since the end of hostilities, above prewar levels.

Exports. Twenty percent higher than before the war; the gap in trade with the United States declining steadily, to about one fifth of what it was in 1948.

Intra-European Trade. Seventeen percent higher than prewar, thanks to increased production, devaluation of currencies and the easing of trade and payment barriers.

Unemployment. Low, except in Germany, Italy and Belgium, but even in those countries, notable and encouraging declines.

Inflation. Generally under control, although the rearmament program is sure to revive inflationary pressures.

$100,000,000 Asked for Tito

Senate and House Appropriations and foreign policy committees.

The text of the message:

"As you know it is our policy toward Yugoslavia to give Marshal Tito such support as we judge necessary for the protection of our strategic and political interests in that area. This policy is based upon the conclusions that:

1. Tito's defection from Kremlin control represents the first setback to Soviet imperialism and as such is an important political symbol; and

2. Tito controls the largest fighting force in Europe except the Soviet Union and that these forces constitute an important element in the defense of Western Europe against Soviet aggression.

Unfortunately, Yugoslavia this past summer has suffered perhaps the worst drouth in its history. Ordinarily Yugoslavia is a substantial exporter of agricultural products to other countries of Western Europe. In return for which Yugoslavia receives raw materials, consumer goods and industrial equipment. The situation, as it now appears is that not only will Yugoslavia be unable to export agricultural products to Western Europe but, even more importantly, will be unable from its own production to feed its own population this coming winter.

Immediate Action Urged

The prospects are that if remedial measures are not begun immediately, Tito's ability to control subversive elements in Yugoslavia will be seriously, if not fatally, undermined, and the ability of the Yugoslavia military forces to withstand an attack by the U.S.S.R. or its satellites, or both, would be dangerously weakened. There is, therefore, great concern, from a military point of view, over this situation and we are trying to find ways and means to extend necessary assistance to Tito without delay. We are obviously handicapped in taking prompt action to obtain necessary legislation while Congress is not in session, but I have decided that we should prepare legislation for presentation to Congress when it reconvenes for the forthcoming short session. However, even if Congress acts favorably upon this legislation with a minimum of delay, it would still be impossible, in view of transportation difficulties in Yugoslavia during the winter, to implement such a program as Congress may approve in time to prevent widespread suffering and possible disorders in some areas of Yugoslavia. The difficulty is, as you of course know, that there is no general foreign aid legislation passed by Congress with Yugoslavia in mind. Under my direction the appropriate executive agencies are contemplating fulfilling the emergency needs by the following measures.

"The Export-Import Bank is using portions of the loan already committed for Yugoslavia for the immediate purchase of urgently needed foodstuffs.

"The Economic Cooperation Administration plans to make available to a third country, such as Italy or Germany, aditional dollar allotments for the purchase of wheat from the United States in return for a commitment by that country to send flour to Yugoslavia immediately. Under the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, we plan to supply foodstuffs in the amounts equivalent to the immediate requirements of the Yugoslav armed forces. Before doing this, the steps required by the act, including necessary consultations with other NATO countries and the execution of an agreement with Yugoslavia, will be taken. In this connection, efforts will be made to assure the continued flow of strategic materials from Yugoslavia.

"While aid to Yugoslavia was not specifically contemplated when these legislative programs were adopted by the Congress, I am sure you appreciate the urgent reasons for the stop-gap action. I plan to submit an emergency legislative program to Congress when it convenes later this month. Fuller consultation with you and other members of Congress will be possible before such legislation is submitted.

"I should appreciate receiving urgently any comments you may have."

Goods for China Approved by U. S., Isbrandtsen Says

The Isbrandtsen Steamship Line of New York said yesterday there was "nothing irregular" in its shipping oil and other strategic materials to Communist China.

The company said through its Washington attorney all shipments were made with the knowledge of the State and Commerce Departments and Customs officials. The company followed import-export regulations to the letter, he added.

The statement was made in a letter from Isbrandtsen attorney John J. O'Connor to Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), acting chairman of a special subcommittee investigating exports to Red China.

29 of 354 Sites to Be Studied For New Air Force Academy

Possible sites for a new Air Force Academy have been narrowed down to 29 from an original 354, the Air Force announced yesterday.

The sites still under consideration are in 13 States. The Air Force said its selection board, headed by Gen. Carl Spaatz, would visit all sites before the end of the year, when it hoped to have eliminated all but two or three possibilities. Sites now under consideration are:

California—San Francisco-Santa Rosa; San Francisco—Napa; Los Angeles-Riverside (March Field); Sacramento-Mather area; Sacramento-Marysville (Camp Beale).

Colorado — Denver (Buckley Field, Cherry Creek and Westminster); Colorado Springs (north and south sites).

Georgia — Atlanta-Duluth; Atlanta-Griffin.

Indiana—Madison.

Michigan—Detroit — Kensington; Detroit—Waterloo.

Missouri—Illinois—St. Louis—Weldon Springs; St. Louis—Alton; Sedalia.

North Carolina — Charlotte — Huntersville.

Oregon—Portland—Canby.

Washington—Seattle—McCord; Seattle—Lake Sawyer.

Wisconsin—Milwaukee — Kenosha.

Since establishment of the separate Air Force, the Air Academy has been considered for basic academic training of air officers, similar to the training at West Point and Annapolis. Though the academy has not yet been authorized by Congress, hearings are expected early in the next session.

Chinese Reds Ready Only for Holding Job

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Red China has a dozen understrength divisions in Korea but they are not equipped or capable of other than "holding operations," Army officials said yesterday.

Forces totaling 60,000 to 70,000 men have crossed the border from Manchuria during the past three weeks, but they have little of the heavy equipment—tanks and artillery—required for offensive action, a top level spokesmn said.

It is conceded, however, that these forces are well enough equipped to tie up troops in Korea's rugged terrain indefinitely, if they can be supplied.

Back of the Yalu River, the Communists have close to another 400,000 trained troops, the Army official said. These forces also are reported to be short of tanks and artillery and would face tremendous supply difficulties in any prolonged, major offensive, he added.

Like other ranking Government officials, the Army spokesman would not hazard a guess as to what might be the aim of the Communists in their belated intervention in Korea.

There seemed three possible explanations, however, for the strange movement of only a defensive or holding force—so light in tanks and artillery—into the mountains of North Korea:

1. An unwillingness on the part of the Chinese Communist leaders to stretch the fiction that the troops moving into Korea are bona fide volunteers beyond the breaking point. As the Army spokesman noted, "It is easy for an individual to volunteer, but somebody controls the volunteering of a tank."

2. The Red Chinese army is very short of armor and modern field guns.

3. Lack of trucks, railroad cars, etc. to adequately supply the forces in rugged country and cold weather prevailing in the area.

Operation Mystifying

While these suggestions would indicate that the Chinese do not aim at an all-out assault on our troops, the whole operation has been so mystifying and holds such dangers that no one is willing to go out on a limb with a definite forecast. That would be attempting to read the minds of the men in the Kremlin.

The Army spokesman did give this report clarifying somewhat the picture in North Korea:

First organizations of Chinese Communists troops to enter Korea crossed the border between October 25 and 30, in divisional size outfits. They were designated the fifty-fourth, fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth "Peace Preservation Units" and consisted of individuals from regular Chinese Red divisions. The units had no tanks and only a couple of batteries of artillery apiece.

Better Looking Units Appear

Another nine or ten divisional size units, which looked more like regular forces than the first volunteer type organizations, followed. There appears to have been no reinforcement of the units with tanks and artillery.

Reports of supply and reinforcement columns coming across the border have slackened materially, though this may mean merely that such operations are going on at night.

Only 69 prisoners have been taken so far. This may be due to the lack of recent battle contact and give little indication of the morale of the enemy.

Both the Chinese and North Korean troops are operating under a centralized headquarters and command inside Korea. The nationality of the commander and staff is not known.

Mule Skinner Jobs Offered By 5th Army

CHICAGO, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The Army is looking for mule skinners." To qualify, an applicant must:

1. Be in top physical condition.
2. Not lose his temper easily.
3. Love animals.

The Fifth Army, which issued the call for skinners, said the Korean war demonstrated the need for pack animals to transport supplies and equipment over terrain which would stop the best mechanical quipment.

"This job calls for a certain amount of persistence," a spokesman said. "You know, you gotta be firm with these critters.

He admitted that maybe this branch of military service wasn't quite as glamorous as the Air Force, but he added that potential recruits shouldn't balk at that.

Men accepted—and they don't need previous experience—will be sent immediately to Camp Carson, Colo., for duty with the Fourth Field Artillery Battalion (Pack) or the 35th Quartermaster Pack Company.

There they will be trained by the Army's top mule skinners.

"Why some of our officers have been doing this for 20 years," the spokesman said.

The Army defines a mule skinner loosely as "anybody who works with a mule."

However, old-time Army mule skinners always have been known for their extensive vocabularies.

The spokesman said the recruiters were interested particularly in getting men similar to one who enlisted the other day—an unemployed lion tamer who couldn't stand to be away from animals.

Yanks Nearing China Border

tains around the Changjin reservoir in north-central Korea. They reported they killed 75 Chinese Communists in a clash Thursday in the mountains to the west.

On the northwest front, patrols of the United States Twenty-fourth Division roamed unopposed more than 6 miles north of Pakchon. Two regiments of the United States First Cavalry Division advanced about 2½ miles north of the old walled city of Yongbyon but met no Reds.

Between the northwest and the north-central fronts, Communists and South Korean republican forces fought see-saw battles for high ground north of the front-connecting Tokchon-Kunu road.

Reds continued their withdrawals from other sectors. One large group of Chinese Reds pulled back from the front north of the Pujon reservoir in North-Central Korea Friday. An American officer said the Chinese were surprised at the resistance they found.

"They had no will to fight," he said.

A United States Eighth Army spokesman said the estimate of Communist troops in northwest Korea now had risen to 100,000. He said 28,000 were Chinese.

Army authorities in Washington said the total of Chinese Reds in all North Korea was 60,000. They said the troops were operating under a headquarters in Korea.

Light Traffic From Border

Air observers reported traffic between the battle lines and the Manchurian border was "light." Several weeks ago it was "heavy."

The Red guerilla smash at Kapyong, northeast of Seoul, and far behind the front, apparently was in retaliation for a United States Twenty-fifth Division attack that killed 537 by-passed Communists in Central Korea.

The American attack blew up a Red command post and captured an ammunition dump in a cave.

The action was in a triangle formed by the towns of Chorwon, Ichon and Pyongyang. About 10,000 Reds were reported in the triangle. The dawn hit-and-run attack on Kapyong apparently was staged from the triangle. Kapyong is about 20 miles southeast of the guerilla nest.

Act Under Central Command

Intelligence officers in General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said the guerillas apparently were operating under a central command along lines perfected by Chinese and Russian Communist infiltrators. Their main effort was directed against allied supply lines to the front, to obtain food, clothing and equipment for continued operation.

A new type of trouble for allied military authorities also was disclosed Friday. More than 100 South Koreans suspected of political agitation were rounded up in allied-held parts of North Korea and ordered to return south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Winter Fashions for Yanks Fighting in Korea

CONTRAST—George Schneider (right), civilian employe of the Quartermaster Corps, models the "wet-cold" uniform being supplied U. N. troops fighting in Korea's bitter winter. Sergt. Pierre Prejean, wearing a captured Chinese Red uniform, counts the layers of Schneider's clothing. The layer principle was adopted because (1) several layers dry more quickly than a single heavy layer and (2) use of several layers traps air that provides extra insulation against the cold. Red soldiers wear nothing under their quilted cotton uniforms

WARM—United States Marines in Korea wear alpaca-lined parka overcoat, fitting over winter-weight garments. Helmet is under hood. Beneath coat are triple-ply cotton field jacket and "overpants"; high-neck sweater; woolen trousers; flannel shirt; heavy woolen underwear, and 2 pairs of wool socks. Hands are in wool mittens or leather, wool-lined gloves, over which are worn mitten shells with trigger fingers

Manchurian Arsenals Making U. S.-Type Shells, POW Says

WITH UNITED STATES TENTH CORPS., Korea, Nov. 17 (AP).—Chinese prisoners of war said today Manchurian arsenals are mass producing American-type artillery shells.

The ammunition is being used in United States Artillery pieces captured from Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist armies, the prisoners said. Many of those guns—originally paid for by American taxpayers—now are turned against American and United Nations forces in North Korea.

The prisoners reported arsenals in Mukden and Harbin are making imitation American shells. But the Communists lack American know how. As a result, one fifth of all the shells are duds, the prisoners said.

During and after the last war the United States provided Nationalist China with millions of dollars worth of military equipment. Much of it was captured by the Reds.

Without ammunition, the big guns would have been useless. So the Reds turned their arsenals to make American type shells.

The prisoners elaborated: American weapons still constitute the bulk of the Chinese Communists' armament. But they complained that of their chief handicaps in combat is the hodge-podge of foreign weapons which complete their armament.

Japanese, Russian and some French guns, taken over by the French-equipped Yunnanese provincial army of war lord Lu Han, are spread among the units—along with American weapons. In North Korea, most Chinese units have American artillery, Russian mortars and both Japanese and American small arms.

Supply trains frequently bring the wrong type of ammunition—Japanese bullets for a platoon with American rifles or vice versa.

Lack of standardized equipment is a primary obstacle preventing the Reds from forging their three million man force into a hard hitting modern army, these prisoners contended.

Fire Razes Depot In Ancient Kyoto

TOKYO (Saturday), Nov. 18 (AP). The Japanese press today reported an early morning fire completely razed the railway station in Kyoto, Japan's ancient capital. One of the United States occupation Army's larger railway transportation offices is in the station.

There were no immediate reports of casualties. The station escaped destruction during World War II. Kyoto, respected as Japan's cultural center, was not bombed by Allied planes.

Buffer State In Korea Called Unwise

By The Associated Press

South Korean Foreign Minister Ben C. Limb said yesterday it would be unwise to set up a buffer strip or even a demilitarized zone along the Korean border with Communist China.

"Every inch of Korean territory belongs to the Korean people and there is no reason to carve out even an inch because of threats from across the border," Limb said at a news conference.

He opposed the idea of a demilitarized zone under Korean sovereignty because of "bandits" in Manchuria.

Limb added that in any event, leaving the border area without protection would be "something to thing about very carefully."

The Foreign Minister said that the South Korean government has no intention of trying to administer conquered North Korea without full United Nations sanction.

Limb suggested that United Nations reconstruction aid should be in the form of "lending know-how and techniques."

"We don't want armchair people but people who will show how to do things by their example."

Apparently reluctant to give his views of Chinese Communist aims in intervening in Korea, Limb said the action was unprovoked and lawless. He told a questioner the motive "possibly" was to protect the border power plants.

"If that is what they sought, all they had to do was to ask," Limb said. "Instead they attacked their neighbor."

Civilian Picked To Evaluate Korea Air War

The Air Force, faced with a Congressional investigation of its tactical air support in Korea, announced yesterday it is sending a civilian expert to the Far East to make an impartial analysis of its combat performance.

The evaluation will be made by Dr. Robert L. Stearns, president of the University of Colorado, and a civilian operations analyst for the Air Force during World War II.

Secretary of Air Thomas K. Finletter asked Stearns to make the study to "provide the Air Force with an impartial evaluation of the Air Force's capabilities for guidance in future air force planning."

Stearns, accompanied by Maj. Gen. Thomas D. White, of Air Force headquarters, will leave Denver by plane for the Far East Sunday. He will be gone about a month.

The Air Force announcement did not mention plans by Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee to investigate the air support given ground troops in Korea.

There have been complaints the Air Force neglected tactical support work and concentrated too much on strategic bombing.

Annual D. C. Sales Tax Returns Not Required

District merchants henceforth need not file annual sales tax returns unless they find at the end of their tax year that they made mistakes on any of their monthly returns.

Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke announced the change in regulations yesterday.

GI Who 'Couldn't Stand' Weather Killed in Action

Five days before he was killed in action November 1, Pfc. David C. Wently of Arlington wrote home that he was more concerned with the extremes of Korean weather than combat.

His father, Evan B. Wently of 1504 N. Potomac st., said Private Wently had been on the fighting line with the 24th Division since the beginning of the war.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., Wently attended Washington-Lee High School and was drafted in 1945 just before he was to graduate.

After four years of occupation duty in Germany, he reenlisted last year and was sent to Japan. Early in July he went into Korea with the 24th.

A member of a reconnaissance unit, Wently said his outfit was in combat from the beginning except for two weeks when it withdrew to reorganize.

Russia Sends More Manganese, Chrome

Russia increased its shipments of war-vital manganese and chrome ore to the United States from $300,000 in August to $1,300,000 in September, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Steel makers have been complaining that they can't get enough manganese to carry out their plans for a 10-percent expansion of steel production. The Soviet Union is one of the biggest producers of the strategic metal.

'Lonely Heart' Killers Appeal to High Court

Counsel for the two "lonely hearts" killers sentenced to die for the murder of Mrs. Jane Fay, Albany, N. Y., widow, yesterday asked the Supreme Court to review their case. The two are Raymond Fernandez, 35, and his girl friend, Mrs. Martha Beck, 30. Mrs. Fay was bludgeoned and strangled at Valley Stream, N. Y., early in 1949. The prosecution said the slaying stemmed from a plot to get money from women whom Fernandez met through lonely hearts clubs.

Home-Made Rockets Used by Viet Minh

SAIGON, Viet Nam, Indo China, Nov. 17 (AP).—The French have hastily thrown up double walls around some of their Red River delta defense posts to strengthen them against home-made bazookas and rockets newly unveiled by the Communist-led Viet Minh.

A rebel force estimated at two battalions blasted apart the 18-inch-thick brick walls of the Ngabatma fortress, 16 miles southwest of Hanoi, with the new weapons Monday night.

Accurate artillery fire from another French post, 4 miles away, helped the 55-man garrison repulse the assault in hand-to-hand fighting at dawn Tuesday. The French estimated the rebels lost 80 killed, against garrison losses of two killed and nine seriously wounded.

But the defense picture for Hanoi and the rich delta lands east of that provincial capital appeared seriously altered by the introduction of weapons from the mountain arsenals of the rebels, already equipped—by French account—with arms from Communist China.

French Army officers reported the bazookas, 4 inches in diameter, fire hollow-headed shells that pierce armor and brick or stone walls, and primitive rockets were launched from platform troughs with powder charges.

Fresh American supplies for the French forces arrived in Saigon today, including six landing craft.

Peiping 'Wrong'

India to Back Tibet in U. N. AgainstChina

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 17 (AP).—Transport Minister N. G. Ayyangar said tonight that India will support Tibet in the United Nations.

Tibet has asked for U. N. help against invading Chinese Communist forces. The disclosure of the government's position by the transport minister came only a few hours after an official government spokesman had announced that Red China had brusquely rejected a second Indian protest of the Tibetan invasion.

Ayyangar, who is a member of the foreign affairs subcommittee in Prime Minister Nehru's cabinet, said India is prepared to support Tibet to the extent that it was wrong of China to march her armies into Tibet before trying for a peaceful settlement.

The minister said Tibet had first asked India to sponsor her case before U.N. but was told she herself could directly appeal.

Referring to the Indian-Chinese correspondence on Tibet, Ayyanger said China's replies had been "discourteous" at one stage and had caused surprise, but that trey had not affected India's recognition of the Peiping regime. He added:

"Nothing has happened in the conduct of China since India's recognition which justifies the withdrawal of recognition of China—not even her conduct in relation to Tibet."

Ayyanger said he still hopes China may prove she is "not too wicked, as some people take for granted."

In her second reply, Red China continued the line she set down in her first note to New Delhi soon after the invasion. Peiping said India had no right to "interfere" in what the Communist consider an internal Chinese affair.

Earlier today Nehru told Parliament his government had decided to maintain "a highly efficient and highly mobile army" in view of the unsettled conditions in central Asia.

'Food for Life' Exhibit to Show Babies in Museum

CHICAGO, Nov. 17 (AP).—A half-dozen babies are in for a unique start in life—they'll be put on display in a Chicago museum.

The infants, who will be foundlings, will live for several months in a special exhibit at the Museum of Science and Industry, cared for by a staff of nurses and pediatricians.

The waifs will be displayed as symbols of life, part of an exhibit by Swift & Co. called "Food for Life," designed to show the public how nutrition affects life and health.

Each baby will have its own quarters, with rocking chairs so a nurse can hold it to simulate a mother's affection. The public will watch the daily baths, formula preparation, diaper changing and other highlights of a brand-new human life.

Falls Church Files Annexation Plea

A petition for a writ of error in the annexation verdict against the City of Falls Church has been filed with the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, City Attorney LaRue Van Meter said yesterday.

The petition asks the high State court to weigh a decision of Fairfax Circuit Court last summer in which a Falls Church bid to annex more than 10 square miles of county land was rejected.

Peace Congress Cheers Russian's Hate-U. S. Tirade

WARSAW, Poland, Nov. 17 (AP). Delegates to the second world peace congress applauded wildly tonight as Soviet writer Alexander Fedeyev declared the United States is a warmongering aggressor saturating Korea with the blood of children.

He proposed a tour of the United States by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commanding the United Nations forces in Korea, and five Korean mothers, each pleading their cases.

The congress, which is top-heavy with Russian delegates and surrounded with Communist fanfare, cheered Fadeyev lustily. But the talk had a disturbing effect among many delegations. The Danes, particularly, were asking whether the congress is so overweighted with Communist tendencies that it fails to win widespread support.

"It was an inflammatory talk," said O. John Rogge, an American delegate.

Red Air Force For Germany Is Reported

BERLIN, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The Russians have strengthened their East German militarized police force by adding an air force unit to it, Allied sources said today.

About 1000 men have been recruited in the air force and sent to Gotha, 75 miles southwest of Leipzig, where the Germans maintained an air force school before VE-Day, reliable informants said.

The British-licensed Berlin newspaper Telegraf reported that the Russians plan to have 5000 men in the "police" air force unit by January.

Score of U. S. Tanks To Be Sent to Berlin

Berlin, Nov. 17 (AP).—A score of American tanks will be sent to Berlin about January 1 to reinforce the Western powers' garrison, it was learned today.

The tanks are 45-ton Pershings, mounting 90-millimeter guns.

They will join the eight British Comets—33-tonners with 77-millimeter guns which arrived yesterday from West Germany.

The Pershings will compose the tank company of the Sixth Infantry Regiment, now being organized here by the United States command. The regiment also will have a mortar company and other heavy infantry weapons.

Gold Says He Became Spy to Aid Russian People, Not Red Government

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP).—Harry Gold, a quiet, little chemist, today described the mixed motives that made him a Soviet spy—a role he said he undertook to advance science and to aid the Russian people.

He told a Federal court that he didn't think his wartime espionage would harm the United States, and that he had no desire to help the Soviet government.

"I did it to help the Russian people," he said, "not the government."

As for the atomic information he turned over to his "Soviet superiors," he said:

"I thought that if the Soviet scientists were included in the work, it would go that much faster."

Gold testified as a Government witness in the trial of Engineer Abraham Brothman and Miriam Moskowitz, both charged with conspiring to obstruct justice in a Federal spy probe.

Gold, of Philadephia, is awaiting sentence December 7 on his plea of guilty to espionage.

The mild-mannered chemist said Brothman and Miss Moskowitz at first induced him to lie to the FBI and a Federal grand jury concerning their activities in a Soviet spy ring.

Gold said he decided to tell the truth because "I knew inevitably that this house of cards I had built could not stand up."

He described the emotional agony his confession caused his family.

After baring his story to the FBI last May, Gold said he informed his father and brother, who at first refused to believe him. He quoted his brother as saying:

"You 'jerk' how could you have done it? You couldn't have done it! You're trying to protect some one else!"

Gold added:

"When I went into custody, it was as if a mountain was in front of me. The mountain began to disappear after I talked to my father and brother, and disappeared completely after I pleaded guilty."

Gold, who says he was a courier in the Dr. Klaus Fuchs spy ring and that he transmitted secrets to Soviet agents, has named Brothman as one of his sources.

British scientist Fuchs, a confessed spy, is in prison.

11 Communists Ask For British Attorney

The 11 Communist leaders convicted of conspiring to teach violent overthrow of the Government asked the Supreme Court yesterday to let a British attorney help argue their appeal before the high bench.

They said they want D. N. Pritt, of Essex Court Temple, London, because 24 leaders of the American bar have refused to work on their case. They need more help, they said, because "an adverse decision would immediately expose 12,000 persons to prosecution under the Smith Act."

The Communists also asked that arguments on their appeal, now scheduled for December 4, be postponed until January 22 to give Pritt a chance to study the case. The court may rule on their double-barreled motion at its next meeting November 27.

No foreign attorney ever has appeared before the Supreme Court. But a nonresident can do so if (1) he is permitted to argue before his own country's highest court, (2) he is sponsored by a member of the Supreme Court bar, and (3) his country extends the same courtesy to United States lawyers.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman said the Justice Department has not decided what position it will take on the Communists' request. They now are represented by five lawyers.

Sir Hubert Wilkins Hurt in Arctic Tests

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP).—Sir Hubert Wilkins, 62, Australian scientist and explorer, has been injured in the Arctic while working on an Army experiment, his wife said today.

Lady Wilkins said she had received a "vague" message saying her husband, a civilian consultant with the "First Arctic Test Detachment, United States Army," had broken "some bones in his upper arm." She said she believed he was in a hospital in Churchill, Manitoba, Canada.

Vandenberg Favors Morse in Contest

A letter to a colleague from Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) yesterday threw this new light on the Republican line-up in the 82d Congress convening in January:

The long-convalescent Vandenberg (1) expects to return to the Capitol in January "at least on limited terms" and (2) favors Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) for the new GPO seat on the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

Vandenberg's letter, written from his Michigan home on November 10, was made public yesterday by Senator Morse in support of his candidacy for the Foreign Relations committee seat.

Some Taft supporters at the Capitol have been privately backing Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) for the Foreign Affairs vacancy, but a spokesman for Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said the GOP steersman will keep "hands off" of the contest.

Morse Sees No Contest

Morse, a staunch supporter of Senator Vandenberg's foreign policy course, told reporters yesterday he doesn't expect any contest.

He has eight months seniority over Knowland in a chamber virtually run by the seniority rule. More than that, he feels he clearly established his claim to the next Foreign Relations unit opening when the Republican conference filled the last vacancy during the Eightieth Congress. Not a single West Coast state is now represented on the committee.

"I simply take it for granted I will be offered the appointment," Morse told reporters yesterday. "I'd be surprised if any Republican colleague of mine does not take it for granted."

Vandenberg's letter to Morse, written three days after the Oregonian was overwhelmingly re-elected, follows:

"I do not need to tell you that I am happy over your richly deserved Tuesday victory. I never doubted the outcome. I should say the path is now clear for you to cash your IOU on a seat in the Foreign Relations Committee.

"If I succeed in returning in January, which I expect to do, at least on limited terms—I shall be entirely comfortable and happy to see you in this committee position (where I have no doubt there will be plenty of jobs for us to do together.)

"Good Luck!

"With warm personal regards and best wishes, cordially and faithfully, Arthur H. Vandenberg."

Vandenberg did not disclose in the letter whether he expects to step down from his seat on the Senate Republican Policy committee and confine himself strictly to his Foreign Relations duties because of impaired health.

Reports recently circulated that Senator Vandenberg may reliquish his strictly party policy post. Sources close to Senator Taft said however that if Vandenberg does so it will not be because Taft wants him off. Taft favors a reflection of all party viewpoints on the GOP policy group, this informant said, and his relations with Senator Vandenberg were never more cordial.

During his Oregon campaign, Senator Morse criticized Admininistration failure to consult with Republicans on key foreign policy decisions but told the voters: "I don't want a single isolationist to vote for me, because I can't represent isolation in the Senate."

If America reverts to isolationism, he said, "we will be in a war we can't win, because we can't win by standing alone."

Morse said he also told Oregon voters that if elected, he will consider himself "a free man," free to vote independently on the merits of any issue that arises.

He won by one of the largest ratios in the Senate. With votes counted from 1963 of Oregon's 2018 precincts, Morse received 367,390 votes, compared with 114,230 for his Democratic opponent and 9978 for a third party entry.

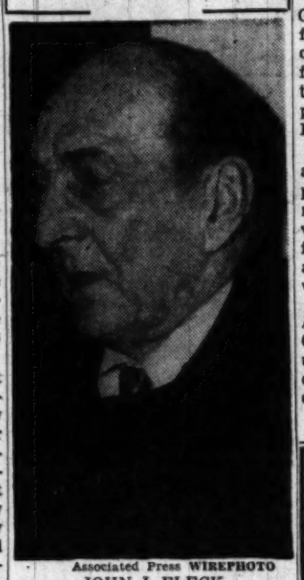
Vendor Held In Threat to 'Hill' Wives



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
JOHN J. FLECK
. . . Newsstand operator held

A North Philadelphia news vendor was held under $5,000 bond yesterday on charges of sending threatening postcards to the wives of four United States Senators.

Arrested by FBI agents in Philadelphia Thursday, he is John J. Fleck, who insisted the whole thing was a misunderstanding.

The FBI said the postcards were sent here to the wives of Senators Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), Chan Gurney (R., S.D.), Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.), the latter part of last August.

Written in longhand and signed with Fleck's full name, they generally followed this wording:

"If a Senator votes to vest powers in the President, he violates the Constitution (Article 1, Section 1)."

"Is it not then the duty and the right of the people to get a gun and shoot him on sight?"

Fleck was charged specifically with writing a threatening postcard to Mrs. Morse and was given an immediate hearing before United States Commissioner Henry P. Carr in Philadelphia.

Reached yesterday at her home at the Westchester Apartments, Mrs. Morse said she had never seen the postcard and was unaware it had been sent her. She explained she was out of town during the latter part of August.

At his hearing, Fleck asked for clemency and declared:

"I'm a patriotic American and my boy is in Korea. I never threatened anyone in my life."

Assistant United States Attorney Leon H. Fox replied, however:

"I talked to you about this in September. You promised you would stop writing letters. But you didn't. Now this has to be done."

Brannan Won't Soft-Pedal Farm Price Plan

By John Ball
Post Reporter

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan yesterday definitely spiked rumors he was going to soft-pedal his farm plan as a result of the recent elections.

Speaking before the National Grange in Minneapolis, Brannan found "a substantial footing of common ground underlying the farm price program advanced by the grange and the price-support proposals recommended by the Department of Agriculture."

Brannan's talk was preceded by an unusual build-up by the department. Several days ago Brannan called in his agency heads for what was admittedly a policy conference. To all reporters' queries about what was decided, the reply was to "watch the grange speech."

After paying tribute to the late Albert S. Goss, master of the Grange, Brannan pointed out that up to the moment of his recent death, Goss "still was ready to cross new frontiers."

"Specifically," Brannan said, "he recommended that the National Grange look into a plan by which, in periods of downward adjustment in crop production, the Government would contract with farmers to convert their land to new pastures."

He promised the assistance of the department in the Grange's study. He then pointed out paragraph by paragraph the points in which his program parallels that of the Grange.

"We are in agreement," he said, "in recognizing the imperative need for measures especially designed to encourage the orderly marketing of perishable products—meat, milk and dairy products, poultry and eggs, and fruits and vegetables.

"I am glad to see the heavy accent on marketing. Surely this means that our common target is a method of supporting the prices of those products which will encourage their consumption, prevent waste, and, at the same time, assure producers effective protection."

He also found a "large measure of agreement" in both programs "for achieving price and income stablization."

"The Grange suggests the use of production payments when no other method of price support will serve," Brannan said. "Because our studies indicate no other method which will serve many of these important needs, I believe there is considerable agreement on this point, too."

Brannan emphasized that now, perhaps more than ever before, agriculture is being put to the test to meet the Nation's expanding needs for production. Our abundant production is essential to the Nation's preparedness and it is essential to help fight the economic spiral of inflation.

Extradition Papers For Stephenson Signed

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 17 (AP).—Gov. Henry F. Schricker late today signed extradition papers to return D. C. Stephenson to Indiana from Minnesota.

The former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan was arrested two days ago in a Minneapolis suburb as a parole violator. The Governor has said that as far as he is concerned Stephenson will remain in prison for the remainder of his life. The aging former Klan leader had served 25 years of a life sentence for the murder of a former State House woman employe.

Labor Wants Big Profits Tax

der but said the tax base should be broadened to collect five or six billion dollars, rather than the four billion dollars asked by the President.

CIO Research Director Stanley Ruttenberg said the tax should produce from $6 to $7 billions. Ruttenberg recommended that the 75 percent levy asked by the Treasury be raised to 85 percent. Instead of the "best three years—1946 to 1949 earnings base recommended by the Administration, the CIO witness urged that average earnings in the full four-year period be used as a base, with the exemption limited to 75 percent of this.

More Drastic Levy Urged

Republican members contended Ruttenberg's argument that the profits tax would reduce the incentive to boost prices actually supported their assertion that the tax would curb production incentives.

Ruttenberg insisted it would do no such thing. He said corporations "thrived" during the period of the World War II tax and their output wasn't "even hampered" by the levy.

Russ Nixon, Washington representative of the independent United Electrical Workers, called for a much more "drastic" profits levy. Nixon termed Snyder's testimony "insincere, lukewarm advocacy of a watered-down and inadequate proposal." Nixon's statement, toned down a bit in delivery, called business opposition to the tax "a greedy effort to guarantee continued fantastic profits."

A long line of business witnesses, however, continued to cite individual earnings records and special hardship cases to show the uneven effect of the tax.

TV Men Protest

John A. Kennedy, chairman of the TV Excess Profits Tax Committee, representing independent television broadcasting companies, testified:

"The ones who will not suffer from the excess profits tax are those who have had excess profits, while the brunt of the excess profits tax will fall upon those who have had excess losses."

Representative Wilbur Mills (D., Ark.) agreed the profits levy might have a "serious" effect on the television industry and suggested an alternative base might be worked out to take care of such hardships.

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, termed the profits tax method "wasteful, inflationary and nonproductive". He said he assumed, however, that the committee would work out a bill and suggested expansion of the bill's relief provisions.

Blocked-Currency Problem

Johnston said the motion picture industry has "an acute foreign blocked-currency problem." He urged the committee to exclude from excess profits taxes funds earned abroad since the war and now blocked from conversion into dollars.

Johnston further recommended that a special panel of Tax Court judges be set up to act promptly on excess profits tax relief applications. Some members of the committee are known to be considering a variation of this idea, with an independent board to act speedily on hardship cases.

Carlton P. Fuller, vice president and treasurer of the Polaroid Corp. complained the tax would sharply hit "young growing companies" and might even "put a freeze on the economy and maintain the status quo as of the time the tax was imposed."

Fuller said the tax might delay the public from getting a glareless automobile windshield his company has perfected but has been unable to promote for lack of funds.

H. Maurice Fridlund, representing the Seatrain Lines, Inc., steamship company, complained that the entire earnings of two new ships operated by the company in 1940 were "virtually confiscated" by the World War II tax. He urged Congress to eliminate "vicious" injustices under the old law and to provide for "prompt relief."

Royal Little, president of Textron, Inc., termed himself "the unofficial representative of the Nation's unborn industries." He said Congress could avoid many of the inequities of the old law if it would give corporate taxpayers the option of paying a tax amounting to 20 percent of their total normal and surtax.

The board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which will send witnesses before the committee next Tuesday, meanwhile announced opposition to the profits tax. Chamber officials said the tax would encourage waste, dull production incentives and be hard to adminster.

the nation which takes that view puts himself or itself "in the center of its map of the world—and the map all goes out from them, and that person and nation are sitting in isolationism, because everything has to originate from them."

Frustrated By Russia

That nation, he declared, "cannot associate itself with larger groupings" in mutual confidence.

The "dream" of the United States in joining the United Nations has been "frustrated by the actions of the Soviet Union from the very beginning," he said.

Our country's purpose has been to end aggression, secure basic human rights and help to improve the lot of all peoples, he added.

"We want only a word in which we can be free and in which everyone else can be free," he continued. This desire is based on an attitude of "moral conviction and moral responsibility," he declared.

To further this aim under present-day circumstances, the United States has found it necessary to carry forth its efforts "within the free world and build up a military machine."

"We can no longer count on the good faith of nations" to keep peace, Acheson said.

The United States is building a "shield" behind which free man can continue to improve their economic welfare; but in doing so, it will require effort and "constancy of purpose."

"We've got to be faithful to our allies and our friends," he declared.

America is in for a period of "great struggle and great sacrifice . . . that will take all the courage we have," the secretary said.

The future does not offer "a long, dismal road with no hope at the end," but it is the "only road of hope," he added.

"We are not pulling back; we have put our hand to the plow; there is only one way to look, and that way is forward."

Service Held Reward Key In Politics

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYHT). "No service, no rewards" is the law of politics, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post told 275 Alumnae of Barnard College and representatives of women's organizations tonight at a political institute, "Women in Public Life."

Mrs. Meyer spoke on the results of 30 years of women's suffrage.

"Politics is power in action and nobody can acquire power without earning it," she said, adding that too few would accept the daily grind of doorbell ringing to get out the women's vote.

Mrs. Meyer urged an awareness of the "ordeal that confronts our Nation and the job of leadership that lies ahead of us."

"Above all," she said, "we should make it clear to our political leaders that making a campaign football out of our foreign policy is unworthy of our Nation."

Such a practice, she said, leads foreign nations dependent on our leadership to believe they cannot rely on us. She cited the policy of the British government in threshing out its foreign policy differences privately as an example to the United States.

"In America we can also argue them out in the Senate," she continued, but warned that we must not sabotage our foreign policy by "slandering the State Department during elections and undermining a foreign policy to which both major parties have agreed."

Kinsey and Customs Officials Tangle Over Pictures of Nudes

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The United States Customs Bureau dueelled with Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey today over whether the sex fact-finder can have some "vulgar pictures" from Europe.

Customs Collector Alden H. Baker said the pictures "of nude men and women" were "too obscene" and refused to pass them on to Kinsey.

Kinsey, reached at Bloomington, Ind., where he is a professor of zoology at Indiana University, replied that the material from overseas was needed in his work.

At the same time, Kinsey made the first disclosure that he is contemplating a third volume in his famed "Kinsey Report." This would be called "Sex Law and the Sex Offender."

His "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male" was a best-seller and he is now at work on the forthcoming "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female."

He said, however, that the material from foreign countries which customs officials found objectionable would not be used in either the second volume or the proposed third.

Kinsey said his institute for sex research "has inevitably had to gather data and material which, under other circumstances . . . would be considered obscene."

Kinsey, who could not be reached, was quoted by Customs officials as saying he would fight for custody of the pictures and accompanying text on the grounds they were "research material."

It seemed possible the controversy might end up before Huntington Cairns, curator of the National Gallery of Art in Washington. Customs officials said they understood Cairns was to be the final judge in the case.

Baker said Kinsey had claimed importation laws allow scientists and medical men to receive such material for research.

"If you saw some of these pictures, you wouldn't think they were scientific," Baker said.

He said at least six previous packets of material, considered "doubtful," had been sent to Washington where they were ordered withheld from Kinsey as pornographic.

One On the Aisle

An Appreciation Of Carter Barron

By Richard L. Coe

I DIDN'T FEEL much like going to the movies yesterday and I Don't think I'd have had anything valid to say about them. When one loses a valued friend, even the erratic pleasure of professional movie-going palls.

In this column I have never discussed my work as such, though readers have often written in questions that bear public discussion. This morning seems a fitting time to touch on one phase of it.

The relationship between the theater managers and their staffs with the reviewers is a delicate one. There is a good deal of social intercourse during each working week; gradually one becomes friends with these professional acquaintances. The danger on this side of the fence lies in becoming too friendly and thereby losing that perspective which is the constant, primary aim in writing about the theater.

Yet, an intimacy is also important, I think. This enables the reviewer to serve as a kind of bridge between the showman and the readers whose trust the reviewer labofs to gain.

The reader, I think, expects not only to be given a fair evaluation of an entertainment, but also likes to think that his guide has something of an inside view for which he on the outside has neither the time nor the opportunity.

The situation, then, demands a balance on both sides, a mutual respect not always vital in all professions.

It was in this relationship that I knew Carter Barron intimately and his delicate sense of it is something I will always treasure. It was, for me, a mark of the man and one for others to emulate.

For, during the past 12 years, first as Nelson B. Bell's assistant and latterly on my own, I had occasion to voice many strong opinions, not only about the entertainments under his sponsorship, but also about the numerous filmland celebrities he hosted and the numberless projects he headed in the Capital. I think he sincerely believed in many of the things I thought phoney, nonsensical or dull, yet he never, by word or deed, questioned my integrity, nor I his.

A FINAL MEETING

The result was that whenever we met, which was often, we were both, I think, honestly glad to see the other. The last time I saw him was at a private screening of "King Solomon's Mines," to which he had brought a little lad from Georgia who is not expected to live. I'm awfully glad it was such a good picture, that I so thoroughly showed my enjoyment of it. Carter just beamed at me when the picture was over and from something he said I knew he was remembering a conversation we'd had years ago. I'd not known him long and told him then I was sorry I'd been so sharp about one of his favorite projects and added that at least when I did admire something it would give my words some weight. "That's the truth, Dick, and I always know that."

I won't go into the numerous personal charities I know Carter was responsible for. Their beneficiaries in Washington, New York and Hollywood know them well enough and many others have passed on. Carter's untiring thoughtfulness of people in time of trouble took him into sick rooms, homes where poverty or sadness had struck and to a harrowing number of funeral rites.

His faithfulness in attending to these matters which so many of us let slide in the press of living always gave a sense of comfort and solidity and I can hope that his moving example in both professional ease and personal kindliness will long serve as an example to those in the same field of endeavor.

I'm sorry though, that vast as was Carter's devoted circle of friends, all of you couldn't have known this fine, thoughtful gentleman.

CALLBOARD: The Variety Club's fifteenth annual dinner dance will go on tonight at the Statler as scheduled, its members having very rightly decided that the last thing former Chief Barker Barron would have wanted would be a waste of the expenses already incurred; it won't be a cheerful party, but in its way it will be a heartfelt tribute . . . The Little has dropped "The Informer" for a go at two other John Ford revivals: "The Long Voyage Home" and "Stagecoach" . . . Most looked-forward-to shorts of the month: The Grandma Moses and the Sadler's Wells ballet visits, which arrived with "My Brother Jonathan" yesterday at the Plaza . . . Elizabeth MacLeod of Alexandria, Lorraine Frantz of Arlington, and Carol Putnam of Falls Church, are among those putting on "The Young and Fair" last night and tonight at the campus theater . . . "The Little Ballerina" plays its final two Children's Specials this morning at 9:30 and 11 on the Plaza screen . . . It's goodby and last get-away night for "Lend an Ear" at the Gayety, that cheerfully insouciant revue which, if you haven't seen, you still should.

Mayor Kills Self After Charge of Using Polio Fund

WOOSTER, O., Nov. 17 (AP)—The Mayor of Wooster shot and killed himself in his office a few hours after the County Prosecutor accused him of misusing polio and hospital funds, police reported today.

Mayor Hillen

Mayor Francis H. Hillen, 46, fired one bullet through his temple last night but his death was not disclosed until today. The coroner ruled the death a suicide.

Hillen, a Republican, had been Mayor since 1947.

Prosecutor Jack Critchfield said he filed charges yesterday that Hillen had misused the city funds. Critchfield estimated the shortage at about $3,600. The prosecutor said Hillen was to have been asked today to resign.

Critchfield said he presented the Mayor last night with a bill of information charging two counts of forgery and four counts of embezzlement.

The Mayor's post here pays $3,000 a year and is a full-time job. Hillen supplemented the income with part-time work as an embalmer in a funeral home.

Carter T. Barron

If ever a man typified community spirit, it was Carter T. Barron, whose death at the early age of 45 has shocked the host of his friends and the city generally. Mr. Barron was not a Washingtonian, but when he came here in the 30s, he adopted the city, giving generously of his time to civic causes. It did not matter what the occasion, Mr. Barron could be counted upon to help. He wore himself out in his last assignment as executive vice chairman of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission. His zeal stood out in a community which, thanks to the absence of home rule, is not distinguished for community feeling, and Mr. Barron without a doubt stimulated many others to volunteer their services. There was not the slightest self-seeking in his makeup; he regarded his services merely as the expression of his duty to the community and of his pride in it.

Cotton Exports

In order to conserve our scarce supplies of cotton the Department of Agriculture announced a few weeks ago that exports would be limited to not more than two million bales (exclusive of Canada) during the eight months ending March 31. Subsequently the total was raised to 2,146,000 bales. Last Thursday the quota was again increased, this time to 3,496,000 bales. Available cotton supplies for the current season amount to only 16.9 million bales and domestic consumption is currently running at an annual rate of 10.3 million bales. If exports, including shipments to Canada and precontrol shipments, total 3.8 million bales during an eight-month period, as they may, the cotton carryover will be reduced well below the four-million bale level regarded as a safe minimum. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that cotton prices, already ultrahigh, went still higher after announcement of the increase in the export quota or that some are predicting 50-cent cotton by next spring.

Nothing has happened since the original export quota was set to change the outlook for a severe cotton pinch. The only plausible explanation of the decision to boost export quotas by more than 60 percent is that the Department of Agriculture lacked the courage to stand its ground under a fire of criticism from cotton farmers and Southern legislators who charged that drastic restrictions on cotton exports would lower cotton prices and benefit the textile industry at the expense of farmers. The increase in the export quota will, of course, have a price-raising effect; and coming at a time when the cotton crop is being harvested will benefit farmers in particular. But it will also increase the costs of cotton textile products and clothing—thereby giving another boost to living costs. Moreover, this step-up in exports might create actual shortages of military and essential civilian articles.

The action of the Department of Agriculture conflicts with the Government's anti-inflation policy and creates a suspicion that the Southern farm bloc is one "special interest" that the Administration would rather propitiate than fight.

Issue In Momentum

In taking leave of the British, former Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas, referring to the setback at the recent Defense Ministers' meeting, warned against the possibility of a loss of momentum in achieving a unified Atlantic command. The reminder was timely. It is generally agreed that all parties contributed to the bungling which accounted for the failure of the Defense Ministers to achieve agreement. However, since then there has been some progress behind the scenes toward a meeting of minds. The French, for instance, have relaxed their insistence that Germans could be incorporated in the proposed European army only in battalions; they now say they will agree to raise the maximum unit to combat brigades of three regiments apiece.

This is a halfway move toward the Pentagon position in favor of divisional strength for the incorporated Germans. On this position our military as yet remain adamant. It is said that anything less than a division would be impracticable because staff control, which occurs at the divisional level, would be difficult to put into effect if the staff and the regiments were multi-national. Here, however, our military run head-on into a basic principle which the French wish to establish; they want the "mixing together" to start at the onset of the organization of SHAPE—supreme headquarters of the Allied Powers in Europe. This is the reason, moreover, they think of the Schuman Plan of a coal-steel pool as a sine qua non, and in this respect, too, they have made a proposal to help the plan forward. They are asking for the revision of all existing Allied controls over German industry so that Germany might enter the Schuman Plan as a free and equal partner.

The French case as it is advancing is becoming cogent enough to merit an equal effort on our part to compromise, so that an agreement can be achieved before any momentum is lost. Events are moving so rapidly that time presses.

Cabinet Changes

Since the election the talk of Cabinet changes has never ceased. It mainly concerns the future of the Cabinet members who figured in the election to the disadvantage of the Democratic Party, viz, Secretary Acheson and Secretary Brannan. Though Brannanism came in for a trouncing, there has been no statement from the Secretary of Agriculture, but Mr. Acheson has not been silent. He insists he will not resign, and the President is emphatic that he will not ask him to. Marquis Childs suggests, however, the possibility of a Republican insistence upon Secretary Acheson's departure as a condition of a bipartisan policy on the Far East. It would be highly irregular if the Republicans should seek to impose such a condition upon the President. With or without Secretary Acheson, the national interest demands a bipartisan approach to the present crisis without regard to personalities.

Secretary Acheson has been the victim of vicious criticism such as has been visited on few public men in this generation. He has borne up under it with dignity and quiet and indeed aloof fortitude. At the same time the fierce and hostile spotlight that plays upon his activity has constrained him in the conduct of affairs. In the case of Europe, toward which policy is more or less bipartisan, this does not apply, and, though he has never shared Mr. Hoffman's sense of urgency about unity in Europe, of late months Mr. Acheson has worked unremittingly toward the same goal, particularly in the form of military unity. It is toward the Far East, where the world crisis is now focused, that he has been inhibited—almost, indeed, paralyzed. The wonder is whether he can do what needs to be done in trying to prevent war with China.

It seems clear that the military have put the onus of decision upon the diplomats to keep us from getting involved in war with China. It had been thought that Secretary Marshall would uphold the hand of Secretary Acheson in his problem. The Secretary of Defense doubtless helped rather than hindered the Administration with the electorate, yet the sad fact is that General Marshall is not the man he was. Secretary Marshall has had a terrific burden ever since he was wartime Chief of Staff. A while ago he had to undergo an operation, and this has left him without the reserves to keep up his former schedule of steady and strenuous application to his duties. It was only his high sense of patriotism that induced him to serve. More and more of the cares of high office are falling upon the willing shoulders of Undersecretary Lovett, who, with even more of the substantive responsibility than he had at the State Department, is coming to be called the permanent bridesmaid.

In sum: personalities should be quite subordinate in these perilous times to the need for a unified country back of a realistic handling of the Far Eastern crisis.

The Union Line

"The fifth round of wage increases is already under way in this country. During the month of September alone more than 1.5 million workers received wage boosts. So our men can't see why they should be discriminated against, and neither, frankly, can I." Talk of "disastrous inflation" arising from a 15-cent-an-hour wage increase for steel workers is based on "one of the most stubborn fallacies to be found, that, because many of the things we buy are made largely of steel, the cost of steel is a major factor in the price we pay." These excerpts from a speech by U. S. Steel's President Fairless follow the union line and should warm the heart of CIO's Philip Murray.

However, Mr. Fairless does not share the delusion of labor leaders that wage increases can come out of company profits without raising prices. That contention he considers "just plain silly." On the contrary, he implied that prospective wage increases, together with increased costs of materials used in making steel, would lead to a rise of at least 10 percent in steel prices. That is just a little inflation, in his opinion, adding only 4 cents to the price of toasters and $17 to the price of a car. Unfortunately a little inflation by one industry added to a little inflation by other industries may add up to a big price rise. These specious arguments deceive nobody—certainly not the consumer.

The fact is that U. S. Steel is confronted with a choice between granting wage increases or inviting strikes. We agree with Mr. Fairless that it is imperative to avoid steel strikes, in these critical times. We also agree that it is unfair to refuse wage increases to steel workers when workers in other industries are being granted wage increases. As a result the industry is virtually compelled to capitulate to union demands for higher wages.

The steel industry's plight demonstrates the futility of Economic Stabilizer Valentine's appeals to industry to hold the price line firm and his appeals to workers to "take something less than they might gain by drastic means." More to the point is Mr. Valentine's warnings that the Government "will not hesitate to use mandatory direct controls to deal with any recalcitrant groups, and in such areas as voluntary measures have failed." In our opinion, a case can now be made out for the failure of voluntary measures, and if a sixth round of price and wage increases is to be avoided, some mandatory controls over prices and wages will have to be imposed before many more months have passed.

Price controls need not be comprehensive. They could be applied first to scarce raw materials where inflationary pressures are strongest, and gradually extended to other commodities, if necessary. The mere threat of such an extension of the control area would have a restraining effect. But these controls will break down, too, unless wages are controlled. Limited wage increases that do not lead to price increases may still be granted by industries subject to price controls, but wage controls will have to be comprehensive to be effective, because under any control system, whether voluntary or mandatory, there is, as Mr. Fairless points out, no excuse for granting increases to one group of workers and denying them to others. Nor would workers tolerate such unfair treatment.

Fair Deal As Usual?

In the rapid-fire exchange of a press conference President Truman could have made only one reply to the question as to whether he will continue to press for his Fair Deal program. Of course, he could not announce an about-face because the Republicans scored substantial gains in the recent election. No President would be so short-sighted as to say in public that he was abandoning his slogans and his program on which his popular strength is supposed to be based. Nor should it occasion any surprise that the President said he expects the new Congress to comply with all his recommendations. For a man in Mr. Truman's position a defeatist attitude would be a major contribution to thwarting his own purposes.

We do not for a moment suppose, however, that the President will go before the Eighty-second Congress with the same program that he presented this year. To do so would be to ignore a year of history—a year that has had profound repercussions upon American policy. In large measure the war in Korea and the new defense program have eclipsed the Fair Deal, as World War II eclipsed the New Deal, as Harry Hopkins was very quick to realize. To be sure, there are some aspects of the Fair Deal that should continue to be pushed: for example, the Hawaii and Alaska bills and home rule for the District of Columbia. Certainly, too, the Administration should continue to urge enactment of its less controversial civil rights measures. But it would be a grave error of judgment for the President to cling to the carcasses of dead policies out of a false sense of devotion to what it has sponsored in the past.

Last January the President asked Congress to repeal the Taft-Hartley law and to enact compulsory health insurance and new benefits for farmers generally interpreted to mean the Brannan Plan. These aspects of the Fair Deal have now been abandoned by many stalwarts of his own party, and they appear to have been emphatically repudiated at the polls. The President could revive these divisive aspects of his program without placing personal pride and narrow partisanship above the national welfare. In other words, a continued fight for these lost causes would be certain to arouse animosities and jeopardize the success of the necessary tax legislation, additional economic controls, and defense measures.

We do not think, however, that the President intended to give the impression that he is committed to a course of politics as usual. In this perilous era of war against aggression the people must learn to tighten their belts instead of making new demands upon the Treasury, and he knows it. His suspension of the housing program that was a part of his Fair Deal a year ago indicates that he can adjust his leadership to the needs of the times.

Absurd Law

The absurdity of increasing the income-tax exemptions of persons 65 years of age or older is highlighted by the news that President Truman will have $200 deducted from his $40,000 tax bill because of his advanced age. The size of a man's income, not his age, is the only rational gauge of his ability to pay taxes. Many of the country's high-salaried executives are in the over-65 age group. Furthermore, aged people with taxable incomes are often better able to pay taxes than the struggling heads of young families in the same income group, since they usually have few dependents, and their personal needs are limited. Congress simply went haywire when it undertook to succor the aged by indiscriminate exemptions granted in disregard of their economic status. It would have been just as reasonable to give extra personal exemptions to men and women with red hair or other distinguishing physical characteristics as to base them on irrelevant considerations of age.

DARK LADY

Of deepest magic, this dark one,
Whose night is only on her hair,
Whose hands are small white birds, the hands
Of lost Iseult, the fair.

Her words have little golden bells,
The echoes of a fairy tongue
That charm the ages back with song
Of when the world was young.

The stars bend low to sing for her
As in the days of miracle,
And roses bloom at Christmastide
For one most beautiful.

And for the quick, or blind of heart,
She puts a spell upon the air,
And all partake of loveliness
With this dark lady there.

"Nobel Nobility"

Welcome to your new home on L st. May you there long continue the elevated spirit of your moving-day editorial, "Nobel Nobility" (November 13)!

Your striking observation that Bertrand Russell receives the golden accolade, presumably as a philosopher who can write, while Santayana, the writer who can philosophize, does not, brings to mind the latter's reference to the brothers Russell in Sanyana's recent slender venture into autobiography Persons and Places, I believe.

Bertrand is mentioned only for the publicity tie-in. It is Bertrand's brother, the boating playboy, whom Santayana chose (or was chosen by) as an intimate. Santayana himself confesses that he didn't mix much with professional philosophers.

What indeed are the criteria of the Nobel Prize judges—in "literature, with an idealistic tendency?" May one suspect that in these times of trouble, the motivation is to honor and thus encourage some practical stimulation of humanity's idealism by the artist? If that is the test, Russell's flair for politics and morals (of a sort), coupled with his background of solid scientific contributions to symbolic logic and other mathematical advances of the first order, can be seen easily to have won the day over Santayana's gifts on the altar of abstract beauty and almost cynical detachment.

However, much as every resident or even sojourner in the Nation's Capital must to some extent be imbued with a kind of political sixth sense, I trust you will not give up your occasional reminders that the human spirit may find at least some derivative nourishment in the words of writers and philosophers who may lack the temperament (or the thick hide) for politics.

Santayana is no doubt classified and dated as a product of Mediterranean culture, born in Spain and spending his declining days in Rome. But even if he were, with some justice, tagged for his middle years as a seminaturalized saint of Harvard and New England, the latter realm could equally have inspired him with nonpolitical examples.

Thoreau's only venture into politics was to go to jail rather than pay taxes. And Emerson, sometimes called the wisest American who ever lived, is known to have made only one political (almost Locofoco) speech in his life, and for the rest, seemed unable to make up his civic mind among the charm and respectability of his Whig neighbors, the allure of the crude but crusading Jacksonian Democrats, and the ivory-tower utopianism of Brook Farm.

'The Macedonian Quarrel'

I feel it is my journalistic duty, as a Washington correspondent for the Greek press, to reply to Mr. Antonoff's letter, "The Macedonian Quarrel" on November 13, 1950. My answer will be based on facts:

1. Mr. Moscopoulos has never been Minister of Foreign Affairs, only an employe of the ministry.

2. Macedonia is inhabited by Greeks. Everybody knows that Alexander the Great was a Greek—you can't say he was a Bulgar—his teacher was Aristotle.

3. There is no such a thing as a Macedonian minority; a Macedonian nation never existed in the history of the world.

4. Mr. Antonoff forgets the fact that an exchange of population took place after World War I. Over 600,000 Greek refugees from Asia Minor have established themselves permanently in northern Greece—which is called Macedonia. In a similar manner the Arcadians in southern Greece call their province Arcadia. A New Yorker is just as American as an Ohioan, etc.

5. What has Bulgaria done for the Western World and especially for the United States? The Bulgars have always lined up against American interests and our basic principles of freedom. Greece has always fought and is still fighting on our side. Five thousand Greeks left today for the Korean front.

6. The 1928 census on Greek Macedonia is:

Greeks	1.237.000	88.1%
Slavophones	82.000	5.8
Various	93.000	6.1

7. The ethnological composition of the Greek part of Macedonia in 1940—according to figures of Christopher J. Christides, based on Mr. Howland, J. Ancel and J. Sion of France was as follows:

1. Greeks:
a) Mother tongue Greek	1.487.571	48.6
b) Mother tongue Turkish	80.310	4.6
c) Mother tongue Vlach	20.000	1.1
d) Mother tongue Slav	10.000	0.6
e) Mother tongue Alba'an	4.500	0.2
	1,602.381	91.1
2. Slavs	74.751	4.2
3. Jews	48.874	2.7
4. Armenians	8.519	0.5
5. Vlachs	6.759	0.4
6. Gypsies	5.045	0.2
7. White Russians	2.894	0.2
8. Albanians	1.445	0.1

Television Advertisement Views

The American television dealers and manufacturers who inserted the full page ad in the Post November 15 may be surprised to hear that I am not grateful for their solicitude for my child and the other children who are being denied vitamin TV for their minds. They will probably be amazed to hear that I am hopping mad.

I feel that that particular ad approaches the all-time low in advertising—even if the statements made in the ad were all true the thing would be vicious, attempting as it does, to blackmail parents into buying a product by playing on one of the most sacred emotions of mankind: love of their children. Moreover, since in non-TV homes children sometimes can and do read, it tells those children that their parents are depriving them of something which is their right, plants the feeling that they are not loved as other children are.

There must be many parents like me who cannot afford television and who, moreover, have not been impressed with the programs we have seen.

Meanwhile my daughter seems reasonably well-adjusted and popular with her playmates, many of whom have television. If they excel her in anything, it is in Western dialect and facility with "shooting arms." She has seen television in the homes of her friends and frequently is bored with it. Should I worry?

I think not, for some of her friends from TV homes seem to get just as bored.

One thing I have noticed, the dealers and manufacturers who are so solicitous for my child's welfare are not offering to give any sets to her and other poor underprivileged ones. Could it be that their real motive—this one unthinkable—is merely to get rid of as many black and white sets as possible before color comes in, so that they can sell the owners another one later? Could children's lives be more blighted without color than without black-and-white?

To get back to where I started, I am hopping mad. So are a surprising number of my friends. I am even a little disappointed at the Post for printing it. I will not cancel my subscription for the Post is a necessity, both to me and my family, but one thing I know, it will be a long time before I buy the TV set I was beginning to consider. EDGAR BOLEN.
Washington.

I am writing you, as the only target in sight, to protest against the publication of the advertisement of the American Television Dealers and Manufacturers appearing on page 11 of The Washington Post of November 15.

This advertisement is an attack upon the internal harmony of any home—and there are many, to my knowledge—in which the parents believe that today's television has a deleterious, rather than a beneficial, effect upon children. It is a brutal attack upon any home in which there is not money to be spared for a television set.

Does your publication of the ad indicate that you approve of it? Or just that you are neutral, having no opinion as to the rightness or wrongness of it? Or that you feel no responsibility in the matter? I am sure that you must draw the line somewhere in accepting paid advertising and assume that you aim to reject the "indecent" and the "flagrantly misleading." If this is correct, I sincerely hope you will review your concept of these terms to see if it is not too narrow.

I am an admirer of your newspaper; otherwise, there would be no point in sending this protest.

Greek Children

One can detect a certain element of justice as well as a touch of irony in the contretemps which has developed between Yugoslavia and Albania. That the two nations so recently allied in the unsavory business of harassing Greece should now have severed diplomatic relations does, indeed, constitute a fitting climax to the highly indefensible postwar tactics practiced by both these countries.

Grave as were the injuries inflicted upon the Greeks in the numerous border raids of that period, their most reprehensible aspect was the treatment of those who had not yet reached their majority. Children and young people were forcibly separated from their parents and removed to Yugoslavia and Albania. According to recent reports, only a small number of the youngsters abducted have ever been permitted to return home.

Americans are frequently accused of driving hard bargains in return for the material aid they extend to impoverished peoples. Whether or not such a charge is just, we could scarcely be indicted as inhumane were continuance of our food shipments to Yugoslavia to be made contingent upon immediate restoration of all Greek children to the cities or towns of their birth.

Surely Marshal Tito should be both willing and anxious to make such a concession in return for the sorely needed sustenance without which his regime isn't likely to survive the present crisis. For our own part, such a step would be indicated on humanitarian grounds even though we had not been the prime participant in Greece's restoration through the Truman doctrine.

Dodging The Main Issues

By Malvina Lindsay

Today's Head Hiding

IF I CAN believe what I hear, the world crisis in which we Americans find ourselves can be resolved with a virtual turn of the wrist. For on all sides I encounter new and mysterious as well as old and shopworn villains in the plot. All of these are human beings. Hence they eventually may be caught, or most certainly will die.

That seems to make it very simple. Now if we were contending with great forces of history—but no, nobody mentions world-wide social revolution, technological invention, shifting balance of world power, pressure of population, breakup of colonialism, periodic upsurge of human tyranny.

Someone whispers of a new, sinister figure at Yalta—complete with mystery trapping except a black patch—who is "responsible for everything." Someone else knows—and the press doesn't—of a shadowy foreign personage, now vanished as if to another planet who had a room in the White House and who was "really the one who started this country down the road to socialism."

Then I always seem to be meeting those who refer in ominous tones to the various "theys," little cliques I gather that in the last few years have brought the world to its present grim state. Often I get printed material exposing these conspirators — carefully within the libel laws when names are mentioned.

IN ADDITION the stock political villains are constantly dragged in to explain the mess of the world. The cast varies according to the company in which I find myself. It may be the late President Roosevelt — or Mrs. Roosevelt, President Truman, Secretary Acheson, Harry Hopkins, Alger Hiss or any one of a long list of New or Fair Dealers.

Or in another group it may hark back to President Harding, even to McKinley and Mark Hanna, and include President Coolidge, "Andy" Mellon, President Hoover, the late Senator Lodge, Senator Taft and all the Republicans of the Eightieth Congress. Sometimes I find Clement Attlee, the man with the curling black mustache. Again it is John L. Lewis. Strangely, Joe Stalin doesn't get the role as often as one would expect. But the blame is often laid at the door of God.

Now I can understand how a politically emotional person would pick his cat to kick from the opposite party. I can understand how many persons would believe that the demise of Stalin would enable the world to go back to "normalcy." I can understand how persons of little education could ascribe present uncertainty and danger to flying saucers, or to atomic scientists, professors, or even to the person publicized in the latest disloyalty charges.

Also I can understand the importance of tracking down those who could do harm to this country and to the world in the present precarious state of international relations. However, I cannot understand educated and supposedly informed Americans naively believing that any one villain or clique of villains in this decade, or even this century, could be the basic cause of present world ferment.

YET SOME of these cloak and dagger explanations of today's dilemma come from persons high in their professional fields, who oddly enough are always hot on the heels of every discovery or advance in their professions. They frequently come from persons who supposedly have been exposed to current and past history.

This naive superficial attitude toward the problems we face is making us mentally vulnerable. We are hiding our heads this time, not in the sands of indifference, but in the escapism of a radio thriller plot.

It is obvious that if we are to save ourselves we must understand the basis of our troubles. What is more, the average man who makes the final decision through his ballot must reach this understanding in some measure. As he finds that the present uncertain situation—if not something worse—will continue for years, he will have to accept the fact that changing it is not so simple as the replacement of one man or group of men or passing some law by Congress.

SURELY SOME way can be found whereby all of us can be helped to see the world picture in the whole; to realize that great forces, rather than somebody we don't like, have primarily brought us to our time of troubles; that our dangers didn't come suddenly or from the hand of God, but were in the making long before two wars devastated Europe and weakened Great Britain, the long-time stabilizer of the world.

Surely there is some way to make us understand how inventions and discoveries have changed our lives, telescoped time and space, stepped up industrialization, and how social ferments on all continents have unleashed forces on which tyrants have ridden to power.

Young people who are inheriting this uneasy world especially need to get this basic understanding. Educators may be trying to give it to them. But they are contending with the superficial talk and attitudes on all sides of those who are making everything sound easier than it will be.

Victory With Taft

Have the leaders of the Republican Party sense enough to understand that Republican victory in 1952 depends entirely upon their willingness and ability to elect Senator Robert A. Taft as their presidential candidate?

Program Presented

By Marquis Childs

Unlimited Manpower Needed

A NEW and far-reaching program for the buildup of military manpower considered essential to national security has been at least tentatively worked out. The new program is the product of long and careful study by all three military services, with the final research funneled through the Joint Chief of Staff.

Childs

Joint Chief Chairman General Omar N. Bradley will give the first previews of the new approach. It will be part of his job to persuade the Eighty-second Congress of the soundness of the program that means maintaining much larger peacetime forces than this country has ever contemplated before.

It is quite clearly recognized that with the rapid buildup of American forces in the next 18 months, the pinch on manpower resources will be severe. But the Joint Chief planners believe this to be inevitable in view of the critical need for the kind of military readiness that simply did not exist when the Communist attack on South Korea began. There will be no chances taken in 1951 or 1952.

This means, then, that by next July 1 the three services will have in uniform 2,700,000 men. From this point the buildup continues to the top level to be reached some time in 1952. President Truman has put this level at "around three million." But, as contemplated now, it will certainly be above rather than below the three million mark.

Obviously to keep such a force in uniform over a considerable period of time—given the very high standard of welfare we set for our servicemen—would put a heavy strain on the taxpayer and on the national economy. It is here that the new approach has been designed to ease the strain.

THE BASIS of it is a complete revision of the present system of Reserves and National Guard. Present practice is to maintain all National Guard divisions at 100 percent officer strength and approximately 50 percent enlisted strength.

Consequently, these divisions are a long way from combat readiness. The four Guard divisions called up three months ago are still in training and the enlisted personnel is still being built up through Selective Service. This is true even though the divisions contain many combat veterans out of World War II.

Before they are ready for battle, an estimated additional six months of training will be necessary, making a total of nine months. If it were not for the presence of the combat veterans in these units, the essential training period might be twice as long.

Under the program now being worked out the Guard divisions would be kept at 100 percent officer strength and 85 to 90 percent enlisted strength. What is equally important, each enlisted man would have had at least a year and a half to two years of active service. Thus these Guard divisions would become truly a "readiness reserve."

The changeover would begin—granted that comparative peace prevailed—in about October of 1952. In this same transition period the first universal military training program would be started in a limited fashion. That is to say about 100,000 18-and-19-year-olds would be trained and would in turn become part of the "readiness reserve."

ON THE basis of present thinking among the Joint Chief planners, any insistence on UMT at an earlier date would be a liability since it would necessarily thin out even further the number of experienced officers available. Those officers are urgently needed just now for more immediate tasks.

There are no illusions that this program can be whipped through as though by magic. It calls for a great deal of education and persuasion. Enlisted personnel who have just completed two years or more of active service will not take readily to the idea of serving in Guard units where they will be required to undergo far more frequent and thorough refresher training than have Guard officers and men in the past. And this concept cuts across prejudices and prerogatives long held by some elements of the National Guard.

But the advantages of the new system are so obvious that it is believed they will weigh heavily against past prejudice. In this manner a reserve would be created capable of going into combat in a matter of days instead of months. It would remove, in part at least, the necessity for keeping large numbers of men in uniform for an indefinite time.

All this is in the belief that the Republicans in control of the next Congress will agree—after a careful review—to the necessity of a force in being sufficient to protect the United States and to meet emergencies abroad. No responsible military leader would act on any other assumption.

Tash Guilty In Civil Suit

she went with Tashof's agents to her home and turned over $1,840 in cash to an employe of Tashof's bonding company.

Then, she related, the next day they had her sign statements admitting embezzling the money and had her sign a note for $13,000.

Drew Out Funds

They drove her to the First Federal Savings & Loan Association, she said, where she drew out funds and cashed bonds totaling more than $8,342.

She testified that up to this time, she had no trouble with Tashof. On the contrary, she said, her husband had been jealous of her employer, although his fears were unfounded.

She said that during a quarrel with her husband, she was torn between love for him and loyalty for her boss, Offutt told the jury.

Tashof denied the extortion charge and reasserted the belief that she had been responsible for the shortage, estimated in the answer to the suit as amounting to 34 thousand dollars over a period of two years. Also, he said, her actions were entirely voluntary and after consultation with her minister.

At the conclusion of the 18-day trial, Judge James W. Morris told the jury that even had Mrs. Brown taken the money, the defendant as a matter of law was not allowed to use force, threas or coercion to inuse force, threats or coercion to intimidate her.

campaign and since the election.

He said the information points to the prevalence of gambling and other forms of crime in Prince Georges County and to the existence of police protection for these operations.

Hughes said the first day after election there were reports that big-time gamblers and their associates had run for cover in the county, "but what the picture on that is right now, I don't know," he added.

Hughes explained he had heard gamblers were passing word to each other to be on their guard against marked money, a device used by police officers to establish evidence that gambling laws have been violated.

Police Chief Takes Leave

Prince Georges Police Chief Ralph Brown, who has held his office eight years, said last night he is taking two weeks' leave. At the same time he strongly defended the record of his department and the reputation of the county.

Brown is target No. 1 for ouster by the Republicans when they take over the five places on the County Board of Commissioners December 5. Brown's leave will continue, probably, until he is fired.

Chief Brown declared that Prince Georges County "is in better shape right now (in terms of crime conditions) than at any time since I have been in office. This has been done by the cooperation of all the police.

"I think we have the best police force in this community, and we have been commended many times for the good work we have done."

Defends His Regime

"I have no regrets. I'm not ashamed of anything. I think we've done a damned good job," said Brown.

Chief Brown added that "the gamblers haven't been out here for some time; we closed the county up and it's still closed."

6 Meetings Set For Tonight to Organize Wardens

Binaggio Aide Gets 4 Yrs. as Tax Evader

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 17 (U.P.). — John Mangiaracina, alias Johnny Mag, once an enforcer for the Binaggio-Gargotta underworld here, was sentenced to four years in a Federal penitentiary today by Judge Albert L. Reeves.

Mangiaracina pleaded guilty to a two-count charge of income tax evasion. Reeves also sentenced gambler Walter Rainey to two years.

Rainey was charged on three counts of income tax evasion. He was acquitted on charges pertaining to his taxes for 1946 and 1947, but was found guilty on the 1948 count.

Counsel for Mag said he had not been convicted of anything in the last seven or eight years. Reeves said the defendant had been picked up at regular intervals and the fact he hadn't been tried or convicted indicated no new-found goodness.

Mangiaracina was active in gambling enterprises with Charles Binaggio and Charles Gargotta, slain last April 5.

Some Workers Sent Home by Phone Firm

About 50 to 100 American Telegraph & Telephone Co. long-lines service employes who refused to promise to report for work as scheduled—picket line or not—were yesterday sent home to "think it over."

The employes' union immediately branded this as a "lockout" of 100 workers.

The company denied the charge and said any employe "willing to accept his responsibility and report regularly" was welcome. The firm said fewer than 50 workers were involved.

Stay Out Two Hours

The incident resulted from an 8 a. m. picket line at 725 13th st. nw. A. T. & T. union members, who maintain service on long-distance television, radio, telegraph and teletype lines; stayed out until the line was disbanded at 10 a. m.

Then, according to Robert Maher, president of Local 12, Division 10, CWA, employes were called in one by one and interviewed by their supervisors. They were told of the need to continue service to the airlines, Government and private agencies and were asked:

Will you report for work as scheduled, picket line or not?

Those who said they would not cross the lines were told to "go home and think it over," Maher reported. Then, if they decided to change their position the supervisor told them to call the office and they could return to work, Maher said.

Many workers refused to answer the question at all, arguing that it was an illegal one under National Labor Relations Board policies, Miss Theresa Coury, secretary-treasurer of the local, said. These were told to go home to be placed on "personal absence without pay," she said.

Normal Service Claimed

The company spokesman, H. M. Botkin, division plant superintendent, said the interviews involved a "review of our employes' responsibilities on the job and we reminded them that we need service on a continuing basis and they were the persons trained to do this job."

Botkin said the firm considered the Western Electric dispute as one between the Western Electric and its union employes and "our obligation to furnish service beyond this difference."

Botkin said service was continued at normal levels throughout the day without interruption.

The local flareup followed the pattern of similar incidents in New York and Philadelphia. All three resulted from the coast-to-coast Western Electric Co. strike.

Western Electric pickets have been setting up brief picket lines at exchanges in various cities and fellow members of the Communications Workers of America, CIO, have respected the lineups. The "hit-and-run" strategy has complicated the continuing service of the telephone units, the union contends.

Earlier yesterday there was a flurry of excitement after a fake bomb containing plaster of paris, wires, and a switch, but no explosive, was found on the front porch of Donald A. Hunter, 50-year-old Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. building and supplies superintendent.

Hunter, who has been with the firm for 32 years, called the police who removed the device from his home, 2438 39th st. nw. Police investigated the matter.

Deadlock Continues

Meanwhile in New York, Federal mediators failed to break the bargaining deadlock in the eight-day-old strike. The union is asking 15 cents an hour increase and the company has offered 11½ cents.

In Philadelphia, the Bell Telephone Co. sought a court order to bar striking workers from keeping telephone girls from going to work there. Twice this week massed pickets have tangled with police in attempting to keep the girls from reporting.

Service at Cumberland, Md., and Oak Ridge, Tenn., was temporarily disrupted by striking pickets.

About 3000 long-distance telephone operators were yesterday denied immediate unemployement insurance for which they applied after charging they were "locked out" for refusing to cross picket lines.

FDR Sounded Warning on Neutrality Act

the much mixed situation. A year ago I was fairly optimistic—today I am the opposite.

On domestic matters I am much more cheerful. There is much smoke but we are winning through.

Always sincerely,

An Anglo-German naval agreement, concluded in June, gave Germany the right to build a navy up to 35 percent of the size of the British navy. It was negotiated without consulting the French, and thoroughly incensed them. It demonstrated to the world that Germany's repudiation of Versailles had not brought about real solidarity among the other great European powers.

Dodd believed that this was the first time "in modern history that England has sided with a threatening imperialist European power, rather than guide a combination of weaker powers against the threatening one." As a result, France was even more reluctant to participate in any form of action against Italy, which was about to embark on its invasion of Ethiopia.

F. D. R. to Breckinridge Long in Rome:

HYDE PARK,
Sept. 19, 1935

Dear Breck:

That is an extraordinary interesting letter of yours of September sixth. As I dictate this, the situation at Geneva still drags. You are right about the British feeling of the threat to the Empire.

What a commentary this whole situation is on what we like to think of as a modern and excellent civilization!

You and Dodd have been far more accurate in your pessimism for the past two years than any of my other friends in Europe. In any event, I think our American position is unassailable—so much so that I really believe that even if hostilities start, I can still make my cruise—leaving the twenty-sixth and getting back to Washington inside of four weeks.

I am delighted to know that your health is so much better. Watch out for that tummy!

As ever yours,

England was fearful of the effect a war between Italy and Abyssinia would have on her own empire.

After all other moves to deter Mussolini had failed, including offers of very substantial concessions in Ethiopia, England decided to bring the issue before the meeting of the League which convened in Geneva on September 4th. Italy maintained that Ethiopia did not enjoy any rights under the covenant because she was a barbaric nation incapable of fulfilling the duties of a member of the League.

Sir Samuel Hoare, British Foreign Secretary, electrified his audience when he announced that Great Britain would fully accept the obligations of League membership for the maintenance of the covenant in its entirety, "and particularly for steady and collective resistance to all acts of unprovoked aggression."

Country after country rose to pledge that they would follow England's lead. Mussolini, nevertheless, went ahead with his preparations.

The "American position" had been prescribed by the neutrality legislation signed on August 31. On October 4, Italy invaded Ethiopia, and on October 5 the President prohibited the export of arms, ammunition, and the implements of war to Ethiopia and Italy, and in subsequent statements he and Hull sought to deter American citizens from war trade that was not covered by the Neutrality Act.

F. D. R. to Douglas MacArthur in Washington:

HYDE PARK,
Sept. 19, 1935.

Dear Douglas:

As soon as I get back from my trip I will take up with the Senate and House people the question of a Joint Resolution and see if it is not possible to put the appointment through and cure the difficulty of Revised Statutes 1222 and 1223. There is not the slightest embarrassment on my part and I am inclined to hope that there will be little or no trouble on the Hill. In any event, I will let you know what the prospects are.

Keep in touch with things after you get out to the Philippines.

Good luck in your new task—the work will be most interesting.

Always sincerely,

The Tydings-McDuffie Act, providing for the complete independence of the Philippines and, more immediately, for the adoption of a constitution by the islands, resulted on November 15, 1935, in a proclamation of the Commonwealth of the Philippines with its own elected officers.

Frank Murphy, who had been Governor General, became the first High Commissioner of the United States to the Commonwealth.

The President had spoken with General MacArthur, who was going out to the Philippines as military advisor, about accepting the appointment as High Commissioner. General MacArthur had told the President that the law would bar his acceptance of the post as long as he remained on the active list of the Army, and that in these critical times he did not feel he could ask the President to seek special legislation which would enable him to accept the post.

F. D. R. to John Roosevelt, at Harvard.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 30, 1935.

Dear Johnny:

Here is the check.

I am, of course, very happy that you are successfully in the Pudding.

It will be grand to see you on the ninth.

Affectionately,

F. D. R. had himself been elected to the Hasty Pudding Club, the junior society at Harvard which produces an annual musical show.

F. D. R. to Mrs. Homer Cummings in Washington:

HYDE PARK,
Nov. 1, 1935.

Dear Cecilia:

She is lovely regardless of who or what she was! She sits on the mantel in my Study.

Thank you ever so much for thinking of me.

I was sorry not to see you when you were in the other afternoon, and I do want to see you and Homer very soon and hear all about the trip.

Affectionately,

Mrs. Homer Cummings had called at the White House and left a "copy of the portrait bust of a lovely lady who lived hundreds and hundreds of years ago. She is Tefes-iti, and, I believe, mother-in-law of Tuteukhamon, but I have never been able to get those Egyptians straightened out."

F. D. R. to Robert W. Bingham in London:

WARM SPRINGS,
Nov. 23, 1935.

Dear Bob:

As you probably know, the unquestionably outstanding private school Head Master in the United States is Rev. Endicott Peabody of my old school at Groton. After graduating from Cambridge, England, and the Divinity School in Cambridge, Mass., he founded Groton School 51 years ago, and the Golden Anniversary was celebrated last year.

The enclosed letter from Doctor Drury, Head Master of St. Paul's School, Concord, refers to something I entirely forgot to speak to you about when you were here. Of course, I cannot personally suggest such a thing to the Cambridge University authorities but you may know some way of doing it. It would be a particularly magnificent thing if Doctor Peabody could receive a Degree from his old Alma Mater next year. He is, I think, 76 or 77 years old.

All of the schools which we call private schools in America (that they call public schools in England) would be made very happy by recognition of Dr. Peabody's really outstanding record.

As ever yours,

F. D. R. to Henry A. Wallace in Washington:

WARM SPRINGS,
Nov. 24, 1935.

Dear Henry:

I am delighted to have the excerpts in regard to the Ever Normal Granary in B. C. China, and also the Chinese New Deal of the Eleventh Century A. D. It is excellent proof that there is nothing really new under the sun. However, I am consoled by the thought that the Ever Normal Granary plan was carried on, though somewhat sporadically, for nearly 2000 years, and that the New Deal of Wang An-shih lasted 10 years before the profiteers ran the old man out of town!

The real difference between those days and today lies in the one word "communication." That implies not only simultaneous information available to the Central Government but also full knowledge and understanding on the part of the individual citizen. Does it not also imply the need for truth-telling? Freedom of the press and freedom of speech were both based on freedom to express opinions—not on freedom to give out false news or misrepresent facts.

I have an idea that a little theoretical discussion along this line would be helpful.

As ever yours,

Secretary Wallace had sent F. D. R. an excerpt from the "Outline History of China," by Herbert H. Gower, in which parallels were suggested between Roosevelt's new Deal and Wang Anshih's politics in the eleventh century. Wallace had also discovered that the concept of the ever-normal granary was known to the Chinese before the time of Christ.

their business to see that I'm broke," Cohen went on.

"I go to court often, and that takes money."

"Is the money all gone?" Halley asked.

"All but what's in my pocket," Cohen answered. It was then he opened his billfold.

Halley asked him when he started borrowing large amounts of money.

"When I started to have trouble three or four years ago," Cohen answered. "From that time on I couldn't live on my earnings."

He said yes when Halley asked him if they ran around $60,000 for 1947, but added: "I don't know nothing about them books."

Cohen, whose auditor said yesterday the gambler has borrowed a quarter of a million dollars in the last few years, said most of them were "friendly loans" and he'd given only one or two notes in his life. As an example, he said, the president of Hollywood State Bank, whom he identified only as "Mr. Brown," loaned him $35,000 without a note.

He said the $300,000 he's in debt represents nothing tangible.

Cohen once said: "I don't say I've been an angel, but I try and overcome everything I've done."

He denied that he's in the bookmaking business, although admitting he'd gambled in the past. He said he doesn't have a mob of his own, as police and others have insisted. He said Los Angeles police keep arresting him—"so many times that I can't remember all of them"—but the record bore out that he hadn't been convicted of anything since embezzlement in Cleveland in 1934.

Names in His Phone Book

Kefauver read a list of names which he said were found in Cohen's telephone book. Included were Charles Binaggio, slain Kansas City gambler, comedians Eddie Cantor and Joe E. Lewis and singer Frank Sinatra.

"They were just friends of mine," said Cohen. "The only dealing I had with Binaggio was on football bets. I talked with him on the phone once, but we never met."

Cohen, replying to questions by Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), said ke knew Artie Samish—California lobbyist and political "fixer"—a "fine gentleman who bought some suits from me and paid all his bills." That's all he had to do with Samish, Cohen maintained, although Wiley said 14 telephone calls had been made from Cohen's home to Samish.

Cohen became highly miffed when Halley called him "a strong-arm man."

"I am a citizen, I got some rights," he shouted. Then he asked Kefauver: "Is it legal the way this man is asking me questions? He asks them then answers them himself.

"I never strongarmed nobody in my life. I may have beat up some people but it was my own doing."

Never Met Adonis, Costello

Halley read the names of a score or more of Easterners and asked Cohen if he knew them. He said he'd never met Joe Adonis or Frank Costello of New York, or Charles Fischetti of Chicago. Cohen said he'd had no dealings with any of them.

He had explanations of other beefs, like the killing of Max Shaman a few years back.

"He came at me with a gun," Cohen said, "so I shot him." He said Shaman was sore because Cohen had beaten up his brother. Cohen successfully pleaded self-defense.

Then there was Russell Brophy, who went to a hospital after a session with Cohen and Joe Sica, now under indictment in a narcotics case. He said that was just a personal argument.

He acknowledged he and Sica wrecked Brophy's book, ripped racing and telephone wires from the walls, but explained: "I just did that to be mean."

"Did you know that Brophy went out of the racing wire business shortly after that?" asked Halley.

"No!" replied the wide-eyed gambler.

Some bookmakers with whom he "laid off bets," he said, were Rocky Palladino in Boston, Jake Koplan in San Francisco, one "Rogers" of Asbury Park, N. J., and Sam Fischer of Chicago.

("Laying off" bets for bookmakers is assuming part of the loss risk for a share of the profits.)

Cohen was asked about another of his reputed creditors, Anthony Milano, president of a Cleveland bank.

"Did you know that Milano served 16 years in a penitentiary?" asked Halley.

"He's a man 60 years old," retorted Cohen, "do you think I'd ask him if he'd ever been in the pen?"

Chairman Kefauver asked Cohen if he intended to pay back the $300,000 he has borrowed.

"Very much so," said Cohen. "I want to go in business."

"What kind of business?"

"The oil business," replied Cohen. "That's what I wanted to get in down in Texas (referring to his recent trip there), but they gave me the bum's rush." (Cohen was escorted out of the State by the Texas Rangers.)

Kefauver inquired about Cohen's connections with Johnny O'Rourke of West Palm Beach, Fla. "O'Rourke said you'd won $60,000 or $70,000 from him, but never gave him a chance to win it back. What about that?" Cohen merely shrugged.

65,000 Fans Expected

Upset-Minded Yale Tackles Princeton

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17.—Thick with ivy and alive with fan-interest, Princeton vs. Yale is the offering in the Yale Bowl tomorrow with the Big Three title and a higher national ranking the twin objectives of Princeton's unbeaten Tigers.

POVICH

The Tigers and Elis will be colliding for the seventy-third time with seventh-ranked Princeton a two-touchdown favorite. With Yale adherents scenting an upset, the Bowl's largest crowd in two seasons, 65,000, is expected.

The twice-beaten Elis had their final workout today to the accompaniment of a sound truck that played Princeton songs and was hired for the occasion by Yale's coach-psychologist, Herman Hickman.

Yale supporters tonight are fondly recalling the upset of 1934, when an under-rated Yale team rose up to defeat the unbeaten Princeton, 7-0. The mounting interest in tomorrow's contest is straining the train, bus line and hotel facilities, said transportation officials.

The Tigers, aiming for their twelfth straight victory, will be meeting a Yale team that has added considerable defensive strength by the return of several regulars who were out of action because of injuries in previous games.

Coach Charley Caldwell of Princeton, tonight admitted the possibility of an upset, saying "Yale is going to do everything to beat us and it's a fact that Yale plays 50 percent better against us than anyone else."

Coach Hickman admitted "We can surprise Princeton," and then added cautiously, "or we can lose by as big margin as they want to roll up."

The Tigers slashing single-wing attack, led by Tailback Kazmaier and Halfback Kleinsasser, averaged 345 yards rushing this season, and Kazmaier's passing has been a tremendous factor in their triumphs. Two big tackles, George Kline, 205, and Hollie Donan, 203, have been defensive bulwarks.

Twice-beaten Yale will be depending chiefly on the ground-gaining of Bob Spears, son of the former Minnesota coach, who operates at fullback in the T-formation. Spears also backs up the line on defense. Stu Tisdale will direct the Elis' passing operations.

Terps Rated 3-Touchdown Favorites

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 17.—West Virginia, with nothing to lose except another football game, is expected to do just that tomorrow against hot-and-cold Maryland.

Despite the fact the unpredictable Terps have never beaten the Mountaineers up here in the hills of West Virginia, the odds-makers have made them a three-touchdown choice to flatten a team which has lost six of its eight games.

For the first time since the Michigan State game, which the Terps won by 34-7 to catapult into the Nation's elite teams, the Marylanders are in near tip-top shape for a game.

Quarterback Jack Scarbath, who sat out the George Washington and North Carolina scraps, is not entirely recovered from a shoulder separation but his injury has mended sufficiently to make him a definite participant.

Maryland's other sophomore quarterback, Bob DeStefano, will start the game. Halfback Ed Modzelewski, hurt in the first half of last week's tie with North Carolina, is back in tip-top shape again as is Fullback Ed Fullerton, who was pronounced out for the season 10 days ago with a knee injury.

Coach Art Lewis' Mounties' played their best games against Virginia Fordham and George Washington, although losing all three.

The game presents Maryland Halfback Bob Shemonski with an excellent opportunity of moving into the lead of the Southern Conference scoring race. "The Brat" has scored 48 points on eight touchdowns to be only one point behind Fred Cone, of unbeaten Clemson. Clemson meets Furman tomorrow.

Chandler Reportedly Will Get New 7-Year Pact

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—A. B. (Happy) Chandler's nickname fitted like a saddle on a blue grass thoroughbred today because major league club owners took just 2 minutes and 20 seconds to decide that the former U. S. Senator from Kentucky should be reelected commissioner of baseball for seven more years.

Presidents Will Harridge of the American League and Ford Frick of the National told Chandler after yesterday's draft meeting that his reelection at the leagues' joint meeting in St. Petersburg, Fla., next month would be a mere formality.

They told him to have his lawyer draw up a new contract to submit to the club owners at that time.

Chandler's first term, which began in 1945, will expire in May, 1952. His present contract calls for $65,000 a year and provides that he be notified 18 months prior to its expiration, whether he will be retained.

Chandler, who took his happy smile into the Kentucky Governors' chair at 37 and into the United States Senate four years later, was told his job would continue after the meeting which lasted less than three minutes.

It was one of the short st sessions ever held by the Major League owners.

Chandler Cinch for New Pact, Paper Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Daily News says "there still is some opposition among the 16 major league owners to A. B. Chandler's Reign as commissioner of baseball" but that nevertheless "Chandler is a cinch" to have his seven-year contract renewed at the majors' winter meeting next month in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Fred Saigh, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, has been the leader, the ews says, in the "give-Chandler-the boot minority group, but evidently hasn't been able to rally the necessary quorum of five owners which could block Chandler's reelection."

The News quoted Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, as saying that while no formal action was taken at the joint major league meeting in Cincinnati yesterday "from the discussions I participated in there isn't the least doubt Chandler will get a new contract next month."

Saigh, in New York for a few days, asserted Chandler's contract was not discussed at the Cincinnati meeting. In Chicago, Will Harridge president of the American League, confirmed Chandler's contract was not mentioned at the meeting.

Bones Plays As Caps Meet Fort Wayne

Coach Bones McKinney will resort to a bit of self-help tonight in his effort to aid the Washington Caps end their losing ways.

Bones will start against the Fort Wayne Pistons for his first game this season in a Cap uniform. The locals have lost four straight games and are now at the bottom of the Eastern Division of the National Basketball league.

The 31-year-old Bones reported yesterday that he "isn't in top condition" and that the "basketball felt as heavy as a medicine ball" after workouts at American University gym.

The team will be without the services of Chuck Gilmur who won't dress for the game because of a bad leg.

Meanwhile, Cap officials said that they have received no bids for the services of ex-Georgetown star Tommy O'Keefe who was placed on the waiver list.

"We hope that somebody will put in a bid for Tommy," McKinney said, "but if nobody does, we'll give him an outright release so that he can try to make a deal for himself."

The Pistons have won five and lost four league games to date and are in third place in the Western Division.

Winner Meets McKinley for Title Friday

Eastern and Anacostia will play off Tuesday at Anacostia in the next phase of the hottest Interhigh football pennant race in history.

Both were undefeated, and fighting it out for the honor of meeting unbeaten McKinley Tech in the big Interhigh Championship game Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

The Washington Post, Touchdown Club and Board of Education are sponsoring the championship game with proceeds going to the nearly empty athletic equipment funds of the nine Interhigh schools.

The decision on where and when to stage the Eastern-Anacostia playoff came yesterday after four days of careful deliberation. Eastern wanted the game played on its field Monday. Anacostia held out for its field Tuesday.

Anacostia won both concessions because the annual Anacostia-Eastern game, always a big money-maker, has been staged at Eastern or Central for four years.

Another factor was Anacostia's schedule jam-up which requires the Indians to win three games within eight days in order to capture its first championship

Anacostia beat Western Thursday to gain the Group I tie with Eastern. It gets a four-day rest before the playoff, and two more before the championship game.

Bold Noses MacPhail's Horse for Second Place

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

PIMLICO, Nov. 17—Greentree Stable's Big Stretch, by Eighty-Thirty out of the mare Easy Day and named for a lackadaisical gesture, showed enough energy in the right places today to win the twenty-ninth running of the Pimlico Futurity Maryland's richest race for 2-year-olds.

Ridden by Jockey Ted Atkinson, here for the express purpose, Big Stretch was eased into the finish line four and a half lengths ahead of Bold, a member of the two-horse Brookside Stable entry.

Third and a head further back in the field of eight, came Larry MacPhail's General Staff

Big Stretch, second to Battlefield in the Belmont Futurity before winning the Breeders Futurity, became the second Greentree juvenile to win the $25,000 added test in three years. Capot, with Atkinson aboard, turned the trick in 1948.

The favorite with a crowd of 10,206 from the start of the betting, Big Stretch returned a $3.80 win mutuel. Performing over a fast track, the chestnut colt was clocked in 1:45 2-5 about average for the stake at its present distance.

The race was roughly contested in spots, with the spirited juveniles, rather than the riders at fault. Steadfast, Joe Culmone's mount, was squeezed back leaving the gate when General Staff came out and Mameluke, on the other side, came in.

Steadfast stumbled and all but tossed the Italian-American youth. Although he went right into contention, this did not do General Staff any good, either.

Big Stretch did not have clear sailing. He was caught in close quarters at the clubhouse turn and Atkinson was forced to stand up in the saddle before he finally got the colt shipshape again.

The Futurity was a three-horse affair. Bold went to the front early and set a swift pace—the first 6 furlongs in 1:10 4/5—while General Staff was close up and Big Stretch in sixth position.

The field was swinging into the far turn when Big Stretch, taken to the outside by Atkinson, began his move. He circled horses to get into third position on the stretch bend.

In the final drive, General Staff took a momentary lead before Big Stretch collared him, brushed past and went on to open daylight before Atkinson began easying him.

The victory was the fourth of the year in 15 tries for Big Stretch and earned him $45,590 for a season's total of $103,967.

Despite the Maryland fall season's sluggish start, business picked up here with a daily average of $851,699, considerably over the 1949 mark. In all, 142,220 customers bet $11,072,095 for the 13 days.

Frankie Sinkwich Says His Tampa Boys Should Pay to See Quantico Marines Play

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Coach Frankie Sinkwich of Tampa University says his team is so overmatched in its game with the Quantico Marines today at George Washington Stadium in Alexandria that his players should be charged admission.

On the other hand, Marine Mentor Major Harwood regards the struggle as the hardest the Corps team has faced.

The coaches gave their highly conflicting pregame predictions yesterday at a press conference at the Touchdown Club.

This is Sinkwich's first season as a college coach and the Youngstown, Ohio, boy has performed something of a football miracle with his Spartans.

Last year Tampa lost eight games without a single victory. This season, against tougher opposition, they have a record of five wins and two defeats.

The only common opponent the Marines and Tampa have had is Camp Lejune. Tampa won, 13-7, while Quantico romped, 42-7.

After yesterday's press conference Sinkwich was recalling some of the great moments in his football career. His best playing day was in the Orange Bowl in 1941, he said, when he passed for three touchdowns and ran for another.

"I completed 13 out of 13 passes that day," Frankie said. "Nine to my team and four to TCU. (Georgia won, 40-26.)

"It was 96 degrees hot. In the last half we had the ball on TCU's one-foot line. Everybody was too tired to run with the ball so we decided to throw a forward pass instead.

"We passed and Dean Bagley intercepted it for TCU. We had to chase him 60 yards before we finally caught him from behind. We should have run. It would have been easier."

"Coaching is a lot rougher than playing," Sinkwich said. "Take the case of Tampa's game with Livingston, Ala., this season.

"At the end of the first quarter, we led, 28-7. They crept up and the score was 28-26 at half time. With four minutes to go, we were eight points ahead. Then they scored twice. Three long desperation passes gave us a touchdown in the last five seconds of the game and we squeaked through, 41-39.

"I bit my fingernails up to my shoulders. It's a wonder I'm not a male Venus De Milo.'

Sportfans will recall Sinkwich as the man with the famous "wired jaw." Sinkwich played the last nine games of 1941 for the University of Georgia with a broken jaw.

He was also famous as "Flat-footed Frankie." Sinkwich always maintained that the alleged physical defect was in reality an asset, because the flat feet gave him the traction to change direction while running at full speed.

Navy Drops Down in Its Class, Opposes Columbia Today

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Oft-beaten Navy steps back into its own class here tomorrow when it meets Columbia at Baker Field. A crowd of 25,000 is expected for the 1:30 p. m. kickoff.

Navy is conceded its best chance of winning since its Southern California victory. But Columbia Coach Lou Little says his team will win hands down if the Lions behave the way they did in tripping Cornell, 20-19, a few weeks back.

Both clubs use the T-formation and neither is particularly noted for its running attack. So it shapes up as a passing duel between Quarterback Mitch Price of Columbia and Quarterback Bob Zastrow of the Midshipmen.

Price, a sophomore, has the best passing record in the Ivy League with 60 completions in 111 tries for 870 yards. Big Z is almost as good with 50 out of 130 for 787 yards.

Left half Frankie Hauff and Right half Bill Powers are the fastest of Navy's pony backs. The loss of Fred Franco because of a leg injury takes away Navy's best source of running power.

Tomorrow's game, by the way, will give Halfback Howie Hansen and Guard Gerry Audette of Columbia an excellent opportunity to renew old friendships with five former Bullis Prep, Md., teammates, who play for Navy, Quarterback Mike Sorrentino, Tackle Paul Tetrault, Center Ted Kukowski and Guards Bill Steele and Bob McCowan. They played together in 1947.

Hoyas Face Holy Cross

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 17.—Charley Maloy, brilliant soph passer who's largely been responsible for a big upswing in interest in Holy Cross football, is the main reason the Crusaders will be two-touchdown favorites over Georgetown here tomorow.

Upwards of 20,000 are expected at Fitton Field where high-scoring Holy Cross has been supplying some spectacular football.

With Maloy throwing for 12 touchdowns in seven games, Holy Cross has advanced 25 points. The defense hasn't kept pace however, and Dr. Eddie Anderson's squads has only two victories to show for its scoring pains. They say it isn't defensive Halfback Billy Dechard's fault. The Washingtonian has been playing good ball

Like Georgetown, the Crusaders haven't been as lucky as they could have been. For example, last time out, they had Marquette beaten, 19-14, but on fourth down with 10 to go, and a pass play obvious, Marquette threw it and got away with it to win, 21-19.

Holy Cross also lost by a point to the good Yale team, 14-13, and was outscored in touchdowns, 5-4, by Colgate and Syracuse.

Maloy, from Rochester's famed Aquinas High, has pitched for more than half a mile, 1235 yards, to be exact, to rank high among the country's leaders.

Anderson, shrewd strategist who piloted the College All-Stars to their impressive victory over the Philadelphia Eagles, has done fairly well with the disorganized bunch that won only one game last

Lou Perini Reported Offering To Buy Myers' B. C. Contract

BOSTON, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Boston Globe says that Lou Perini, president of the Boston Braves baseball team, has offered to buy the contract of Denny Myers, coach of the winless Boston College football team.

The paper said it learned the offer was made at a meeting of the Boston College Alumni Athletic Board Monday night.

Myers' contract has a year to run. His salary is reputed to be $12,000 a year.

The Globe said a "highly reliable source, close to the B. C. scene," reported Perini made an outright offer to supply the money "to oust Myers." Boston College plays home games at Braves Field. Perini leases the field to the college on a percentage basis.

The Globe said that although the Braves take was upped from 15 to 20 percent this year, Perini's group was getting less than several years ago because Boston College crowds have dropped with poor showing of the team.

The Globe said the names of Eddie Doherty, head coach at Arizona State College at Tempe, Holy Cross backfield coach Charlie O'Rourke and B. C. Freshman Coach Mike Holovak have been named as possible successors to Myers.

Connie Mack Rekindles Love Of Early Days for Golf at 87

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17. (AP).—Connie Mack said today he intends to return next spring to a love of his earlier days—golf.

Just how important the 87-year-old "Mr. Baseball," who retired recently as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, considers this decision was shown by the fact he himself called the Associated Press to break the news. Except on rare occasions, Connie heretofore has spoken through an intermediary.

"I'd like folks to know," he asserted, "that I certainly don't want to settle down in a rocking chair yet, not by a long shot.

"In years gone by I used to play golf—a lot of golf—and I feel I can still do it. And when spring comes I'm going to join some club, probably out in California, and play a lot of the game again. That familiar saying is true—you're as old as you feel."

"Naturally," he went on, "I'll continue to be quite active with the Athletics. Why shouldn't I be? My life has been baseball, and it still is baseball. But golf comes second. It's great, too."

Scout Report Makes Navy Seem Fierce

By Whitney Martin

NEW YORY, Nov. 17 (AP).—After listening to a scout's report on the Navy team we are a little puzzled that the Middies are taking steps to deemphasize their football scheduled. In fact, we rather expected they would start booking the Chicago Bears or Cleveland Browns just to get a little competition.

Navy has won only one game this year, but if you think that fact keeps the scout of a future opponent from viewing with alarm you are slightly off beam.

A football scout, to refresh your memory, is a guy who gets in on a pass, takes his seat in the back row of a press box, and when the games starts begins doodling all over countless sheets of paper, making chicken tracks in a variety of patterns and also notes of such observations as whether a halfback blinks twice or three times when he is going to get the ball, and whether an end is a sucker for a flea flicker flutter play.

Must Scare Tleam

His information is invaluable, though, and a good scout who earns his merit badge often is the difference between victory and defeat.

One of his chief duties, however, is to scare the daylights out of his own team. No matter how futile the future opponent may have shown itself to be, a scout can uncover hidden power in its performance, and make the team for which he is scout believe it is about to meet the National League All-Stars.

Joe Stanczyk, Columbia backfield coach, was assigned to scout Navy, Columbia's opponent here tomorrow, in its last three games. It is assumed he caught the right train and watched Navy, and not Army. His report leaves some doubt.

"It's hard to see why Navy didn't win its last three games," Stanczyk reported. "At least when you look at the statistics.

"The Middies are due to come of age one of these days, and really break loose.

Looks Like Army

"Bill Powers is an exceptionally fine right halfback, and Dave Bannerman looked very good at fullback when he was put in late in the Tulane game. Frank Hauff at left half is a solid player, both on offense and defense. In fact, Navy's defensive backs are fine, and the tackles are really tough.

"It's a rugged team, and gives a physical beating to every team it plays. There was nothing wrong with its pass defense in the Tulane game except Joe Shinn, the Tulane end who is one of the best I have seen in a long time.

"Bob Zastrow has improved, and runs the team nicely, and the Navy passing offense is a complexity of patterns. Zastrow is what you might call a flexible quarterback. He passes from anywhere. I saw him run all the way across the field with the ball."

Incidentally, we have a tendency to agree with Stanczyk that one of these days—they'd better hurry—everything will click at once for the Middies and they'll run wild. Against Army, maybe?

Georgetown is returning to the New England scene of its only victory this season, a 20-10 decision over Boston College. Boston's Dick Doyle, who was a big wheel in that one, claims his bad ankle is completely recovered.

Other members of the Hoyas' sizeable delegation from New England who stood out against B.C. and are at least willing for a repeat performance include Capt. Tommy Hardiman, Gino Pagluica, End Gus Fornaciari and Joe Pallotta.

Worchester is the scene of Coach Bob Margarita's coaching debut. Georgetown won it for him last year by beating Holy Cross with a fourth-period drive, 20-13.

Arnie Scores On Runs of 72, 90 Yards

Halfback Arnie Tranen, playing his last high school football game, scored three touchdowns, two on long runs, as Coolidge's Colts outclassed Bell, 42-0, in an Interhigh game yesterday at Roosevelt.

Tranen's scores came on 72 and 90-yard jaunts, and a one-yard plunge. His first score was in the opening period, and climaxed a 69-yard march.

In the second quarter, he went 72 yards off tackle, and wound up his scholastic scoring in the third period when he took a Bell punt and raced 90 yards to pay dirt.

Bill Williams reeled off a 70-yard scoring jaunt on the second play of the second half. He also passed to Jim Gradijan on a 16-yard touchdown play.

Ted Naddio plunged over from the two to wind up the scornig in the fourth quarter. Lynn Leathery place-kicked five extra points, and Ed Barnett one.

The closest Bell came to a touchdown was in the second quarter, when the losers drove to the Coolidge 27-yard line. The drive stalled there, however, and Coolidge took over.

Army at Stanford

Ohio State and Illinois Headline Today's Games

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP).—The City of Champaign, Ill., becomes the Nation's football capital tomorrow with top-ranking Ohio State and eighth-rated Illinois bringing a batch of major issues into head-on collision.

Ohio State, beaten only by Southern Methodist in its first game of the season, will be seeking to apply a firmer grip on the Big Ten championship and the No. 1 national position won last week in the Associated Press poll.

For Illinois, defeated only by Wisconsin, it's a chance to scramble the conference race and possibly pluck off the lucrative Rose Bowl bid. Ohio State is a seven-point favorite.

This battle of Midwestern titans before an anticipated crowd of 71,000 steals the spotlight from the activities of the other members of the first 10 and the diminishing ranks of the unbeaten and untied.

Army Prestige at Stake

Of these, Army's Black Knights attract the greatest interest with one of their rare excusions to the Pacific Coast. The West Pointers, unbeaten in 27 games, will play twice-beaten and once-tied Stanford at Palo Alto, Calif., on a field heavily soaked by continuing rains.

This is a "prestige" game on the light Army schedule, despite Stanford's mediocre record. he Cadets must score a convincing victory if they hope to regain the No. 1 spot they have held off and on during the turbulent campaign.

They are ranked third at the moment, behind Oklahoma, having plummeted from the top after a 51-0 "under wraps" conquest of little New Mexico.

Earl Blaik's hard-hitting athletes rule 20-point favorites over the Indians. The other unblemished powers — Oklahoma, Kentucky, California and Princeton—also are two to three-touchdown choices.

Wyoming and Loyola of Los Angeles, who round out the seven-team unbeaten and untied list, are idle.

Oklahoma will attempt to make Missouri No. 29 in its string of victories, already a modern-day record. This Big Seven Conference clash is at Norman, Okla., with the Sooners given a three-touchdown edge.

California's fourth-ranked Bears will tackle San Francisco before closing out the season November 25 with Stanford, a game that is expected to plant Pappy Waldorf's boys in the Rose Bowl for the third straight year.

Kentucky, eyeing a major bowl assignment, takes it easy with North Dakota while looking ahead to the finale with rugged Tennessee. Princeton, pride of the East, will try to put another nail in the Ivy eague championship against improved Yale at New Haven, Conn.

Texas, fifth-ranged, is rated two touchdowns over Texas Christian at Fort Worth. Tennessee, No. 9, plays Mississippi at Knoxville. Michigan State, No. 10, invades Pittsburgh.

Mount Vernon Wins 13 to 7

Two quick second-quarter touchdowns carried Mount Vernon to a 13-7 triumph over Norview High of Norfolk in a Virginia High School Group I League game last night at Mount Vernon.

After a scoreless first period, the Majors got rolling and scored on a 79-yard march, after halting a Norview drive on their own 21. Dick Downs culminated the drive, which required only six plays, when he plunged three yards for the score. Sonny Lakey's placement gave Mount Vernon a 7-0 lead.

Norview got to the Mount Vernon 49 after the following kick-off, but the Majors took over at that point. Two plays later, Art Kuhn, 135-pound scatback, broke over left tackle, cut to the sidelines and went 45 yards to a touchdown.

Kuhn also returned a third-quarter punt 55 yards to a score, but a clipping penalty nullified it. In the same period Norview marched to the Mount Vernon one-yard line. A penalty put the visitors back to the 6. Waddy Ward fumbled at that point, and End Jimmy Darr recovered on the five for Mount Vernon.

Downs, going through the middle, fumbled and Norview Guard Johnny Tigmo plucked the ball out of the air and pulled most of the Mount Vernon line across the goal line. Jack Terry converted from placement.

Norview scoring: Touchdown—Tigmo; conversion—Terry (placement).

Chamberlain Loses, 20-6, To Wilson

Wilson's Green Tigers, held to a 7-6 lead for most of the first quarter, scored a touchdown late in the opening period and went on to score a 20-6 triumph over a surprising Chamberlain team in an Interhigh game yesterday at Wilson.

After returning the opening kick to midfield, the Tigers wasted no time in scoring. On the first play from scrimmage Chris King went to the Volts' 35. Mike Somers then skirted end for the touchdown. Dick Sebastian made the conversion to make the score 7-0, Wilson.

Chamberlain came right back to score on its fourth play. Quarterback Joe Kolley flipped a lateral pass to Tony Magnatto who threw a long pass to End Bob Ruth. The play covered 64 yards. Tom Wall's attempt for the extra point was wide.

The Green Tigers scored again in the first period after a 37-yard march. Bob Scheele scored from 13 yards out on a handoff from Chris King. Sebastian's kick was wide.

Late in the third period King returned a Chamberlain punt 13 yards to the Volts' 37. After three unsuccessful pass attempts King hit Tom Seiler for 30 yards to the 7. King smashed through the center of the line on the next play to paydirt. Sebastian added the conversion.

Eberdt Powers W-L High to Victory, 6-0

By Gordon Beard

Sam Eberdt's one-half-yard plunge for a touchdown with 18 seconds remaining in the first quarter gave Washington-Lee High of Arlington a 6-0 victory over Warwick last night at W-L.

Eberdt's buck through guard ended a 60-yard W-L drive, which began following a Warwick punt. Five first downs were rolled up in the march.

The Little Generals appeared stalled on the Farmers' 15-yard line, but Eberdt came off the bench to power to a first down on the 12. He carried to the three in two plays. Don Hobbs was stopped on the half-yard line and it was then that Eberdt bulled through for the score.

John Herrlein, who intercepted four Warwick passes, stalled two of the losers' drives in the last four minutes.

With three and a half minuter remaining, Feamster blocked Hobbs' punt and the visitors took over on the W-L 42. Herrlein intercepted Tommy Petty's third-down pass on the 22-yard line.

Herrlein intercepted another Petty pass with 45 seconds remaining and returned it 30 yards to the Warwick 30-yard line.

It will be the third straight time St. Anthony's has appeared in the title game in four seasons.

Referee Barney Felix called it a draw, four rounds and six points for each, but Judges Arthur Suskind and Joe Angello scored for the Cuban Hawk, 6-4.

Stanford Set for Any Weather

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (U.P.)—Sidelights on Saturday's football headliners:

Stanford, 19-point underdog as host to Army, worked out with both dry and wet footballs this week and will pass against the Cadets no matter what the weather turns up . . . it will be a dandy duel between All-America end candidates—Bob McColl of Stanford and Dan Foldberg of Army.

The big one of the day Ohio State at Illinois, could be called the "battle of the battered quarterbacks" . . . Tony Curcillo of Ohio State is limping on a bad ankle and Fred Major of Illinois will be wearing a facial mask to protect a jaw injury . . . it's tougher on the Illini, though, for they're a T team and that model depends strictly on the quarterback to generate power.

Claude Arnold, Oklahoma's deadly forward passer, is shooting for a record against Missouri . . . "Mr. Icewater" hasn't had a pass interceptor in 84 tries this year and the record is 88 set by Pennsylvania's Reds Bagnell . . . Bagnell is the reason Penn is favored by 6 over Wisconsin at Philadelphia.

Dutch Meyer of Texas Christian is an old T. C. U. teammate and warm personal friend of Texas Coach Blair Cherry but he's happy Blair has stepped out of the coaching ranks . . . they match teams for the last time Saturday and Meyer said, "he's about the toughest guy to beat I've ever hit."

Tennessee ought to be favored over Mississippi on tradition if nothing else . . . Ole Miss has won only two and tied one in 23 games with the Vols and went 19 yards before Charley Connerly and Barney Poole engineered their first victory in 1947.

Dartmouth-Cornell series resumed at Cornell this week is as close as you can get 'em . . . each won 16, tied one . . . Cornell is favored by 7.

North Carolina, which tied Maryland with the "A" formation, probably will stay with it in an effort to outscore the potent T of South Carolinia . . . Steve Wadiak of South Carolina personally has rushed as many yards as his combined opponents.

Everett Grandelius of Michigan State has outrushed his opponents, too, and needs only 50 yards against Pittsburgh to reach the 1000-yard mark for the year . . . Big Bob Smith of Texas A. and M. should improve his record against Rice . . . He has burned up 1224 yards so far with two games to play.

Bowie Opens 13-Day Meet Today

14 Start In Lynch Handicap

With a field of 14 named overnight for the $10,000 added Thomas K. Lynch Memorial Handicap, Bowie opens today for a 13-day session marking the final phase of Maryland racing for 1950.

Bowie will operate without opposition in the East after today and, with both betting and attendances at Pimlico ahead of last year, the Prince Georges track opens on an optimistic note.

Mrs. Walter Jeffords' Post Card, decisive winner at Garden State in the Quaker Handicap, will renew his rivalry with the Hasty House Farms entry of Inseparable and Seaward. Post Card, a 3-year-old, picks up 5 pounds following his Jersey victory but still gets weight from Inseparable due to tote 119. Post Card has been assigned 116.

The All Ages test of a mile and a sixteenth should provide a thriller, the limit including horses from 2-year-olds, Brookmeade Stable's Oats, to 7-year-olds, Mrs. T. Christopher's Renown 2d.

Although beaten in the Pimlico Special, much interest will center in the showing of Lewis J. Shaw's Abstract. The one-eyed colt was second in a Bowie stake before going to Laurel and jolting Talent by winning the Washington Handicap. He carries 115 pounds today.

Others in the overnight limit are Samuel Greenfeld's High Trend, Cross Bell Ranch's Friendly Frank, A. E. Morris' Ted M., J. Gavegnano's Fighting Fleet, Darling and Sims' Dukes Gal, A. J. Ryan's Brick, M. J. Roberts' Laico and S. W. Labrot, jr's Arcave.

Bowie offers a well-balanced opening card with races at distances from 6 furlongs to a mile and a half. Post time for the first race is 1 p. m. with the daily double on the first and second races closing 15 minutes earlier.

Culmone Now Trails Shoemaker by Only 1

Making it eight winners in three days with a double at Pimlico yesterday, Jockey Culmone slashed Willie Shoemaker's lead to one, 330 to 329, in their battle for 1950 national riding honors.

Shoemaker failed to win at Hollywood.

Culmone won at Pimlico with Nottin $6.60 in the first race and Dot Beiltro $6.80 in the eighth. Shoemaker had six mounts, but got only two seconds and one third.

Here's how they stand

	Mounts	Winners	Seconds	Thirds
Shoemaker	1410	330	230	192
Culmone	1449	329	253	183

Cadets Buy Full Page Ad To Cheer Team

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 17 (AP).—West Point's Cadets won't be here tomorrow for the Army-Stanford football game. But they bought a full page ad in today's Palo Alto Times to cheer the Black Knights to victory.

The ad read:

"Army team: We can't be there for the game, but you should be able to hear us from the Hudson, screaming—

"Beat Stanford!"

Lieut. Seldon B. Graham, jr., head cheer leader for the West Pointers, who made arrangements by mail for the advertisement, said it was paid for by vountary corps-wide contributions.

Bolling Flyers End Season Today Against Norfolk

NORFOLK, Nov. 17.—Mush Dubofsky's Bolling Flyers close their 1950 football season here tomorrow afternoon against a speedy Norfolk Naval Receiving Station team.

The Flyers will be seeking their fifth victory of the season and a win will give them a 5-3 mark for the year.

Bolling suffered a 7-6 defeat at the hands of Norfolk here last season.

Dubofsky will call on his ace 140-lb. halfback, Art Hage, to lead the Flyer running game, while veteran front-liners Alex Skerlock, John Covert and Pete Ryback can be expected to give the Norfolk single wing plenty of trouble.

Pirates Add 3 Dodger Scouts

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates today announced three additions to their scouting staff besides George Sisler, one of baseball's greats who, previously was named chief of all Pirate scouting operations in the Pittsburgh area.

They are Robert C. Clements, J. Rex Bowen and Howard F. Haak, described by the Pirates as "all able and experienced men and former members of the Brooklyn staff." Clements will be western supervisor of Pirate farm organizations and scouting operations of the West Coast.

Montpelier Hunt Closes 'Chase Season

ORANGE, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—The Montpelier Hunt races here tomorrow will close out the 1950 agenda of steeplechase racing in this area.

The diversified six-race program will be topped with the fourteenth running of the Noel Laing steeplechase. To be contested over two miles and a half of brush, the $3000 added money handicap has lured nine well-known contenders.

By virtue of an easy victory in the Battleship Steeplechase at Middleburg last week, the Montpelier Stable's Hampton Roads has drawn the top weight assignment of 152 pounds.

Two nominees which registered previous victories in the Noel Laing will be back for a second try. They are the Happy Hill Farm's Adaptable, which won the 1948 renewal and placed third in last year's running, and the Mill River Stable's Monkey Wrench, winner of the 1948 running.

The entries in the six races:

First race: The Meadow Woods, one mile and three quarters over hurdles—Manchon, Siradella, V.P.I. Clef, Pole Star, Alliflor, Maryador, Painted Ship, Flash o' Fire, Dik Dik, Trout Brook, Avonwood.

Second race: The Virginia Plate, one mile—Swiggle, Flag Ho, Avonwood, Manchon, Painted Ship, the Feudist, Arctic Fox, Ardashir, Blue Teal.

Third race: The Noel Laing Steeplechase Handicap, about two miles and a half—Adaptable, Banner Waves, Hampton Roads, Induction, Crown Royal, Replica 2d, Monkey Wrench, Navy Gun, Pretender.

Fourth race: The Montpelier Cup, about two miles—Pretender, Snob Tourist, Lively Man, Crown Royal, Scurry, Gal, Induction, Navy Gun, Tiptime, Banner Waves, My Good Man, Good Marks, Flash o' Fire.

Fifth race: The Madison Plate, about two miles over hurdles—Spleen, Peter de Boots, Hampton Roads, Bab's Whey, Swiggle, Extra, Deferment, Manchon, Flash o' Fire.

Wisconsin Retains Cross-Country Title in Big 10

CHICAGO, Nov. 17 (AP).—Michigan's Don McEwen repeated as individual champion and Wisconsin retained its team title in the thirty-sixth annual Big Ten cross-country meet at Washington Park today.

McEwen was clocked in 19 minutes 34.1 seconds which bettered his own meet mark of 19:44.5 but will not be recognized as a new record because today's race was run over a new 4-mile course.

Wisconsin scored 56 points to win the team crown. Second with 61 was favored Michigan State College, making its first Big Ten championship appearance. Other team scores: Indiana, 70; Michigan, 94; Purdue, 122;

DEAR FOLKS: AT BOWIE

Those who follow the trend of betting can't figure the change in per capita betting. For instance, at Laurel the wagering by each customer was $45 on several occasions and the meeting showed a mark slightly over $50. At Pimlico last Thursday, the average customer put $91 through the tote and for the meeting the mark was better than $83. H.L.B. calls my attention to the winning hunch parlay on the final Pimlico card—Nottin and Useless, Frank Bone and Jimmy Del Vecchio, who fell with their mounts on the Thursday program, were right back in action the next day. Jockeys, like fliers, try to get up as quickly as possible after a fall. It keeps them from cracking up mentally. See you on the rail, and lest we forget, it's Bowie and not Pimlico.

Revised Provisions For Veterans' Status In Temporary Jobs

Many thousands of veterans in temporary jobs will get a break under Civil Service's new regulation governing indefinite personnel actions.

It seems to have escaped general attention, but the many veterans among the 150,000 temporary employes hired by the Army, Navy and Air Force didn't have preferenee under Section 14 of the Veterans' Preference Act. Under the agreement Civil Service negotiated with the defense agencies, they could fire veterans and non-veterans alike at any time.

Civil Service threw that part out of the agreement out the window, an action that has led to strenuous protests from both the defense and the nondefense agencies. Under the new regulations, this is how the veterans can be treated:

After a veteran serves satisfactorily for a year, his probationary period will be brought in under Section 14 which gives him protection against layoff, suspension or demotion. Furthermore, the provision will not only cover the veteran who was appointed to a temporary job in defense, but all other veterans in temporary jobs as well as veterans who will be appointed to the new indefinite jobs.

The Federal Personnel Council opposes this provision. Its members who are personnel directors of the various agencies are still fighting it. They insist on the right to hire any and all temporaries and indefinites at any time. Civil Service officials are of the opinon that the Veterans' Preference Law requires the revised provision and they are in no mood to change it.

REEMPLOYMENT: There's a misunderstanding, too, on the reemployment rights of veterans who leave both indefinite and permanent jobs to enter the military service. This is how it will work:

An employe who enters the military service will have legal rights only to the permanent job he left, even though he had one or more indefinite promotions. But when he returns, he can be restored to a job that includes his indefinite promotions IF: (1) there are such jobs available at that time, and (2) persons in those jobs have fewer retention points than he has accumulated.

A veteran who is an indefinite employe will not have a legal right to be restored to his old job. This rule is identical to the practice during World War II when war service veterans had no legal job rights.

At that time, however, the Civil Service Commission directed agencies to reemploy war veterans if jobs were available on their return. The policy worked pretty well as tens of thousands of such veterans were reemployed without question. Many weren't reemployed because the war agencies they had worked in were abolished by the time they returned.

But the Civil Service staff is now working on a similar order that would have agencies rehire veterans who left temporary and indefinite jobs.

PROMOTIONS: A provision also has been made in the new regulations to consider veterans for grade promotions when the indefinite period ends. This is how it will work for all employes:

At some future date, when the emergency ends, the Civil Service Commission will order cancellation of all indefinite grade promotions given to permanent employes after last September 1. Prior to this day of reckoning, the agencies will be given plenty of advance notice so they will be in a position to make grade promotions at that time on a permanent basis.

Civil Service, however, will direct that each agency set up one or more committees to review all permanent promotion adjustments. Also, it will insist that veterans who have reemployment rights and who are still in the service be considered for grade promotions. Veterans along with nonveterans will be considered for the permanent promotions. A career employe who is given an indefinite grade promotion will have "retreat" rights back to the job he held on September 1 if hi indefinite promotion isn't made permanent.

No matter how its handled, there will be one ruckus after another on the day indefinite grade promotions are put on a permanent footing.

7 Firemen Draw Stiff Jail Terms As Firebugs

Youthful Volunteers Set 12 Blazes In Empty Buildings In Prince Georges

Seven youthful firemen-turned-firebugs were given sentences of up to 5½ years yesterday in Prince Georges County for setting fire to 12 unoccupied buildings.

The stiff penalties were handed out by Judges Charles C. Marbury and J. Dudley Digges, sitting in the nonjury case in the County Circuit Court.

Six of the seven, who pleaded guilty last Friday to starting the fires in barns and empty dwellings in the Forestville-Rosaryville area last summer, received indeterminate terms not to exceed five years.

The seventh, who the court said was previously involved in housebreaking and larceny cases, was sentenced to 5½ years.

All seven were convicted last week. Sentencing for the crimes—which the court said "put the public in mortal terror" and "shocked the conscience of the county"—was delayed until a pre-sentence investigation by the county probation officer, Roy D. Bright.

Sentenced to five years in the Maryland State Reformatory were William T. Tippett, 20, Suitland; Willy D. Grusholt, 19, of Forestville, and Arthur J. Stacy, 23, of Parkland.

Thomas A. Marlowe, 19, Suitland, received 5½ years in the reformatory.

Three juveniles were also sentenced, but their confinement in prison was suspended on condition they serve their time at the Maryland Training School for Boys at Loch Raven. They are: Joseph Baker, 16, District Heights, Clifford Brown, 16, Morningside, and Ford Baker, 14, Joseph brother.

The judges praised the work of the two detectives who "broke" the case—Wilson J. Purdy and Vincent Free. Marbury observed that "it is hard to say how many buildings have been saved due to their work."

Before sentencing, Probation Officer Bright told the court that none of the boys, except Marlowe, have criminal records; that they all come from families highly regarded by their neighbors and that Stacey was once a Boy Scout leader.

The court said it took all these things into consideration before passing sentence, but that "we cannot regard these cases in the light of minor infractions . . . such as petty larceny or breaking into some building."

School Bus Crash Hurts 4 Children

Four children were injured and 60 others shaken up yesterday at 4 p. m. when a Montgomery County school bus struck a culvert on Route 109 between Poolesville and Beallsville, Md.

The injured children, all students at Poolesville Consolidated School and all of Barnesville, Md., were:

Charlotte Wilson, 8, bruised foot; Connie Ward, 8, abrasions of leg; Jane Thompson, 7, who bit her tongue; Nancy Chapman, 13, cuts on the leg.

The children were taken to the nearby office of Dr. Gordon M. Smith, who treated them.

The bus driver, Clarence Offutt, of Beallsville, told Montgomery police that a truck ran him off the road.

The floor boards of the bus were broken, causing the injury to the children, the police said.

A Fairfax County school bus, carrying pupils from Manassas High School, was sideswiped by a car on Route 7 near Falls Church yesterday. Police said the motorist, Howard Dawson, 38, of Bluemont, Va., suffered a broken arm

James Fitzmaurice, 12, of 2B Woodland st., Greenbelt, Md., suffered a broken arm yesterday when hit by a school bus he was waiting to board. He was taken to Prince Georges General Hospital.

Man, 52, Jailed For Kicking Out Wife's Eye

Godfrey Edwards, 52, yesterday was sentenced to serve 16 months to four years in prison for mayhem in kicking out the right eye of his wife, Gertrude.

The sentence was handed down in District Court against Edwards of 1213 O st. nw.

In another case, Fred Ginyard, jr., 20, of 1304 Ninth st. nw., received one to four years in prison for stealing two Government checks from mailboxes and then cashing them.

Bennie Melvin, 36, formerly of 441 Lamont st. nw., got six months to two years for escaping from a deputy United States marshal in 1947. At the time, Melvin had been detained as a housebreaking suspect and walked away from the custodian. He was not followed since the marshal had two other prisoners under his care.

Roy J. Irby, 28, of 636 E st. sw., received one to four years for stealing more than $900 in jewelry, clothin and money from automobiles.

MAJ. GEN. PAUL STREIT AWARDS PURPLE HEARTS IN MASS CEREMONY AT WALTER REED

Death of Baby Attributed to Stone in Lung

Police Probing Fatality Due To Hemorrhage

The death of 4-year-old Charles A. Cole, Jr., of 4470 Quarles st. ne., yesterday was attributed to a stone fragment lodged in his lung.

The boy had been playing with two other small children in front of a neighbor's home Thursday afternoon when he suddenly ran home gasping for breath. He was pronounced dead within an hour.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday that Charles apparently started to chew on a stone, and a fragment of it slipped into his lung. He issued a certificate of accidental death due to asphyxia.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Cole, have two other children, Nancy, 6, and Bonnie, 8.

Dr. MacDonald also certified the death of Dudley W. Chester, 14-month-old son of Tech Sergt. and Mrs. John C. Chester, of 3334 Nicholas ave. se., as accidental, due to asphyxia.

The baby started to choke while his mother was giving him a bottle Thursday afternoon, police said. She called her husband, stationed at Bolling Air Force Base, and he rushed the baby to the base hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 3:35 p. m.

Police, meanwhile, are investigating the death of William Lancaster, jr., 5-weeks-old son of Corpl. and Mrs. William Lancaster, of 1324 G st. se.

The child was taken ill Wednesday night and admitted to Walter Reed Hospital, where he died at 8:25 a. m. Thursday. An autopsy disclosed death was due to a brain hemorrhage, police said.

41 Awarded Purple Hearts In Walter Reed Ceremony

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Brave men.

They brought them in on Stryker frames—paraplegics, men who can look up or down but not sideways—and in wheel chairs, and the luckier ones walked, and the general pinned medals on their chests, saying:

"War has always inflicted cruel wounds on those who participate in battle. That is the cost of victory."

It was the first mass presentation of Purple Hearts at Walter Reed Hospital to the men wounded in Korea.

Forty-one of them, squared off in the Red Cross auditorium and with their relatives and nurses looking on, heard Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, the hospital's commanding officer, read the order in quiet tones:

"The President of the United States, authorized by the order of General George Washington August 1782, has awarded the Purple Heart to individuals named hereafter for wounds received in action places and dates as indicated."

Down the rows the general went then, pinning the Nation's oldest military honor on the chests.

First to get the gold-surrounded velvet medal was gum-chewing, cigarette-smoking Pfc. John H. Galloway of Sawyerwood, Ohio, a 19-year-old tattooed like a sailor.

Galloway's leg was one mass of plaster of paris and he explained dispassionately how he could wiggle his toes down but not up. North Korean shrapnel having done something to the nerve. He surprised everyone by declaring he was staying in the Army, and in the infantry.

For others the days of foot-slogging were over. Such were the amputees, and the three men—two on stryker frames and one in a wheel chair—whom war paralyzed.

The men came from Weymouth, Mass., from Chattahoochee, Ga., from Toledo and from Hazelpatch, Ky., and some had been fishermen before choosing the Army trade, some farmers, some boys who never knew man's work until they took on its most hazardous form—the life of the platoon infantryman.

The names were Corrigan, and Hrobak, and Franks, Smith and Rumbutis, Jankowski and Cardoza and Gautier.

For all of them, the general said, the Purple Heart was but "a little token."

"A grateful country," said he, "can never repay these boys adequately.

"We can only thank them and give them recognition in ceremonies such as this, and heal their wounds."

Nevertheless, the inscription on the back of the medallion spoke proudly: "For military merit."

Elude Employes

$67 Stolen From Store By 3 Men

Three men fled with $67 in cash from the Acme Store, 421 13th st. ne., yesterday afternoon, eluding several employes who chased them.

The trio entered about 2:30 p. m. and asked checker Eugene Nelson, 22, for a pack of cigarettes, police said. Nelson was busy with a customer and when he turned his back to them, one of the three grabbed the money from the cash register.

The three robbers were described as Negroes wearing brown clothes.

Farran Sues Trial Board, Chief for Libel

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, and three members of the police trial board were sued yesterday for $200,000 libel-conspiracy damages by a suspended police private.

The suit was filed in District Court by Warren G. Farran, 10117½ Greenock rd., Silver Spring, Md. Besides Barrett, the defendants are Inspector Robert S. Bryant, Capt. John J. Agnew and Capt. Thomas E. Edwards.

Farran, through Attorney T. Emmett McKenzie, said he was libeled through publication in the newspapers of details of the trial board findings in his case.

After he was clearing of a charge of stealing two air conditioners, the trial board found him guilty of counduct unbecoming an officer, making a false statement, and failing to constantly patrol his beat, in connection with the air conditioner incident.

Groveton Acts To Get More Fire Hydrants

Fatal Blaze Results In Naming of Special Citizens Committee

The citizens of Groveton last night appointed a committee of four to draft a plan to get more fire hydrants for the town, where a mother and her three children died in a fire early Thursday.

Angered by the lack of hydrants in certain areas of Fairfax County, the citizens assembled at the Penn-Daw Fire House at a meeting spearheaded by the Penn-Daw volunteer firemen, the Groveton Parent-Teachers Association and citizens associations.

They pointed out that the nearest fire hydrant to the Groveton apartment house, where the four lost their lives, was a mile away. Pumper trucks had to carry water back from the hydrant to the house in repeated trips.

Victims of the blaze, which burned out the apartment house, were Mrs. Dolores M. Harper, 22; her daughters, Elaine, 3, and Patricia Lynn, 2, all of whose bodies were found in the smoldering embers, and a third daughter, Brenda Irene Harper, two months old, whose body Has not been found.

Three other families, totaling 20 persons, were left homeless by the fire.

The committee was appointed last night to draft a plan creating a subdistrict in Sanitary District One, which is one of three Fairfax County sanitary divisions. The purpose would be to levy a special tax on residents there to supply fire hydrants in the subdistrict. It would include Penn-Daw, Groveton, Fairhaven, Jefferson Manor and Belle Haven.

Committee members are Roscoe O'Flaherty and James L. Kiser of the Groveton Citizens Association, Chief C. J. Guckert of the Penn-Daw Fire Department and H. C. Crowther of the Fairfax County Committee for Study of Fire Hydrants.

Meanwhile, the husband and father of the four fire victoms, Raymond L. Harper, began preparations for funeral services for his family, to be held Tuesday at 1 a. m. from the Wheatley funeral chapel in Alexandria. Harper, a stock clerk in a supermarket, will attend the services in clothing furnished by the Fairfax County Community Chest.

State Sentor Andrew W. Clarke, who represents Fairfax and Alexandria, yesterday said he was communicating with Governor Battle to ask for a study commission on the need for strengthening the Virginia Fire Code.

Clarke added that Fairfax County can help itelf "immediately" by enacting a building code condemning unsafe structures. Such a code has been drawn up and is awaiting action by a study committee and the board of supervisors.

Two new cases of poliomyelitis were reported in the District, bringing the city's total for the year to 180.

The new cases, according to the District Health Department, included a 24-year-old woman of the 1900 block of 3d st. nw., who was admitted to Gallinger's Hospital Thursday, and a 7-year-old boy of the 4400 block of 14th st. nw., admitted to Children's

Dr. F. C. Heath Is Appointed Fairfax County Health Officer

Dr. Fred C. Heath, health officer for Giles and Montgomery Counties and the city of Radford, Va., has been designated the new health director for Fairfax County.

The appointment was announced yesterday by the Virginia State Health Department, subject to confirmation by the county's board of supervisors. Although the board is not scheduled to meet again until December 6, the State health department said, Dr. Heath will report for duty December 1.

He succeeds Dr. H. C. Bradford, who resigned the Fairfax post November 2 over what he termed "differences of opinion" with State and county authorities.

At the time of his resignation, Bradford charged both the State health department and the county board of supervisors with "lack of cooperation" and asserted the State's local health policies were "outmoded."

Pending appointment of a successor, Bradford's department has been under the supervision of Dr. J. C. Neal, director of local health services for the State department.

Heath, 45, has been in public health work since 1945 when he accepted the Radford post after being discharged from the Army, according to the State department. He was granted leave of absence in 1948 and 1949 to attend Johns Hopkins University's school of public health and hygiene, where he received a master's degree in public health.

Before entering the Army in 1942 he was engaged in private practice.

Collazo Pleads Not Guilty to Slaying Charge

Slayer's Opinion

Killing Called A 'Comedy Of Errors'

The slaying of little Lynn Danton was called a "comedy of errors" by Andrew Danton yesterday as he lay on a hospital bed in the Petersburg (Va.) Federal Reformatory, charged with his daughter's murder.

Danton, who has admitted that he beat his 4-year-old daughter to death and tried to kill his wife and himself, was questioned again yesterday by FBI agents. His wife lay near death in the Front Royal Memorial Hospital, unaware her daughter is dead.

Danton did not elaborate on his "comedy of errors" statement, but officials believe he was referring to the sequence of events that ended in the murder charge.

Danton has admitted he parked the family car at Gooney Outlook, 7 miles south of Front Royal, about 3 p. m. Wednesday. In his confession to police, he said he got his wife and daughter out of the car on the pretext of taking pictures. He got a hammer and a jack from the car trunk and hit his wife on the head. When she staggered away, he ran after her, and dragged her back to the car. Then he struck his daughter on the head, took a broken pop bottle, slashed the throats of his wife and child, put them back in the car and drove it off the mountainside.

When the car halted, Danton told police, he again cut his child's throat, struck his wife on the head, slashed his own throat and wrists and tried to burn the car, using Lynn's comic books. A forest ranger came on the scene at this point.

Police who questioned Danton yesterday said he made one change in an earlier confession. Yesterday, he said he first struck his wife; earlier he said he had first hit his daughter.

Because of Mrs. Danton's critical condition, Front Royal Police Chief Charles Menefee said yesterday, she will not be questioned for "several days." He said doctors refuse to state whether she will pull through. "There's a chance she will, and just as much chance she won't" Menefee said he was told.

With both State and Federal authorities pressing their investigation into the cause of the macabre slaying, Chief Menefee said yesterday, "We now feel it must have been the financial situation." But he added that a motive has not been definitely established.

Only positive clews to the motive have come from Danton himself, who told police he was worrying about finances. When Danton was faced with his father, a brother and a sister in Front Royal Thursday, he sobbed, "I want to die! Oh, God, let me die."

Police believe he will recover from his self-inflicted wounds.

When he is physically able, he will be arraigned on the murder charge. Formal complaint on the capital crime on a Government reservation was filled with United States Commissioner Charles Nelson at Harrisonburg by FBI agent Leonard Walters.

The child's body was shipped to New York relatives for burial yesterday. Funeral services will be held Sunday at the Midwood Memorial Chapel in Brooklyn.

No Date Set For Murder Trial Of Puerto Rican; Lawyer Asks Delay

Standing proud and erect, Oscar Collazo pleaded innocent yesterday to murdering a policeman during the attempted assassination of President Truman.

"I plead not guilty, your honor," said the little Puerto Rican Nationalist. His hands were clasped behind his back and a blue tie hung over his brown suit.

Thus Collazo got his first contact with District Court, where he will stand trial on two counts of first-degree murder which may send him to the electric chair, as well as two counts of assault with intent to kill.

The courtroom was jammed. Marshals scrutinized the audience and stayed close to the defendant. He appeared fully recovered from the bullet wound he suffered during the November 1 Blair House gun battle.

During the fracas at the steps of the presidential residence, Collazo's confederate, Griselio Torresola, was shot down as was a policeman guard. Two other officers were wounded.

After the arraignment, Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut suggested December 13 as the trial date.

Court-appointed defense attorney, Leo A. Rover, said he would not possibly agree to this. He said that there were serious questions of law and fact that he and Co-Counsel Sidney Sachs and Kenneth Wood must investigate.

Besides, said Rover, there was the consideration of Collazo's "mental condition." This reference suggested the possibility of an insanity plea.

Speaking slowly, Rover, a former United States attorney, pleaded:

"With all the force at my command, I beg of your honor that you not fix a date which would be tantamount to depriving the defendant of his constitutional rights. It would be a step backward in the American way of doing things."

He said that he knew of no other instance where a man was brought to trial here for first-degree murder six weeks after the killing.

Judge Schweinhaut corrected him on this, saying there were other cases and that the court criminal calender was almost current.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay then announced that he did not wish to prejudice the defendant's rights.

"But the Government is entitled to a speedy trial," he declared.

Judge Schweinhaut set December 8 for filing of defense motions and gave the Government five days to answer. This automatically cut out the December 13 date for trial. He then said he would try to advance another case in which Rover is engaged. It appears doubtful the Collazo case will be reached this year.

A marshal poked at Collazo's back and beckoned him to the cell block.

When he was taken to the prison van, Collazo's hands were bound by handcuffs to a prisoner on each side of him.

He said nothing as he passed a barrage of flashbulbs of newspaper, newsreel and television photographers and stepped into the jail van.

Puerto Ricans' Wives Get Hearing Wednesday

NEW YOPK, Nov. 17 (AP).—A Federal Court hearing will be held Wednesday for the wives of two Puerto Rican Nationalists who attempted to assassinate President Truman.

Charged with conspiracy to injure the President are Mrs. Rosa Collazo, 42, whose husband, Oscar, was wounded November 1 in a gun battle with guards in front of Blair House, and Mrs. Carmen Torresola, 22, widow of Griselio Torresola, who was killed in the assassination attempt.

Hertz Bared Secret Tax Data Accusers in Falls Church Say

Falls Church Commissioner of Revenue A. Burke Hertz has been accused of allowing a citizen to use his master tax file—which includes confidential personal income data.

Minutes of a closed city council meeting Monday night, released yesterday, show the council read affidavits supporting the charge, heard Hertz's story, and decided to forward the case to the State Tax Commissioner for action.

The affidavits were sworn out by City Treasurer James E. Ferguson and his granddaughter, Miss Julita A. Chambliss, one of Hertz's former employes.

Hertz said yesterday that he gave former City Councilwoman Mrs. Merrill Lee Chanel access to his master tax file September 21.

Mrs. Chanel "wasn't interested in the income tax data," Hertz added. "All we wanted were the names and addresses of people who had paid their capitation (poll) taxes" for what Hertz described as "a personal project."

The "personal project," which would reveal the names and addresses of eligible Falls Church voters, was in anticipation of the hotly disputed November 7 city referendum, Hertz said.

On that date, citizens voted to discontinue city council appointment of their city attorney and elect him in the future. Mrs. Chanel has been an outspoken advocate of the elective plan and worked actively during the referendum campaign.

Hertz said his master file was the "best source" for names and addresses of persons who have paid the poll tax—information which he said was public. The three-by-five cards also carry personal property and confidential income tax data.

The Virginia Code declares it is "unlawful" for a commissioner of revenue "to divulge or make known in any manner the amount of (personal) income" returns and provides a maximum fine of $1000.

Experiment Blanche

Correct Make-Up Shapes the Face

By Ann Lawrence

(Eleventh Day of Blanche's Beauty Program.)

TODAY'S IDEA of beauty is the oval-contour face. And the idea behind correct hair-styling and make-up is to create this illusion, in the eye of the beholder.

As we told you, Blanche was wearing no make-up when we first started this experiment, so the facial structure was obvious: A diamond-shaped face, with high forehead, receding hairline, high, wide cheekbones and a narrow chinline. All of the breadth is at the center of her face, with the widest part stretching from ear to ear.

With Eddie Senz, famous movie-make-up man, there was a three-way consultation. He pointed out to Blanche that the hair-style she was wearing further accented this diamond shape. Hair high off her forehead, pulled back at the sides of the face and behind the ears resulted in an even greater width across the widest part of her face.

THE CORRECT COIFFURE would foreshorten her face, fill in the narrow chin line and make the lower portion of the face appear wider.

Following the Senz theory of "face-spacing," the eyebrows would be arched at the bridge of the nose to make the nose appear shorter. Rouge would be applied at the highest point of the cheekbones, with the color carried to the farther-est corner of the eye. Her mouth would be reshaped, horizontally wider than the natural lipline, again adding breadth to the narrow chin line.

Blanche was doubtful. Never having worn make-up, other than powder and occasionally, a light tracing of lipstick, she couldn't believe that she could learn to apply her own make-up successfully. And she wasn't quite sure she would like the result if she did!

WE ASSURED HER that the make-up would be kept simple and suitable for daytime and street wear. Nothing would be obvious or theatrical. And with a few practice sessions, she could learn to handle her beauty tools with real professional ability.

She would use: For powder foundation: a cream make-up base, nondrying, closely matching her own skin, but slightly darker in color to tone down her skin's florid look; Her lipstick: a pure red, as basic as a black dress, and one of the popular new coral shades which contains quite a bit of gold, again counteracting the too-florid complexion. Face powder: One shade lighter than her powder foundation (since the foundation is one shade darker than her own skin) but matching it in tone. Eye makeup: Light brown pencil, brown mascara, blue-gray eyeshadow.

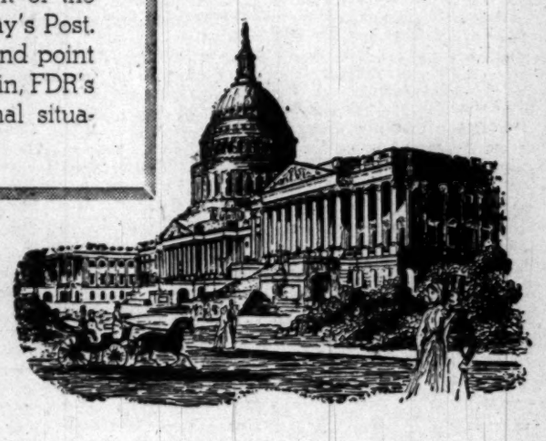
150 Years of Congress in Washington



150 years ago next Wednesday, the first joint session of Congress in Washington was held in a tiny building atop Capitol Hill.

In Sunday's Post, Reporter Chalmers M. Roberts describes that first gathering in the new Capital. He tells what President John Adams said to Congress on that memorable day, explains why the Senate had to name a President Pro Tem, and reports on the housing problems of the legislative newcomers to the city.

Read this interesting account of Washington as it was on November 22, 1800—a significant day in the history of Congress.

Fashions A La Carte

With a dash of imagination and little money, you can create the effect of a large holiday wardrobe by assembling your own costumes out of separates. Evelyn Hayes discusses the fashion possibilities of evening separates in a timely story on clothes for the holidays, in the Women's Section.

Veep, Mrs. Still Honeymooning After First Year

PADUCAH, Ky., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The Veep was just teasing all the time.

Vice President Alben W. Barkley let on as though he hadn't had time to buy his bride of one year a present for their first wedding anniversary tomorrow, but he came through handsomely today with a big radio-phonograph combination.

"I'm thrilled to death, it's just what I wanted," said the lovely Mrs. Barkley, who married the Vice President a year ago in St. Louis, just four months after they met at a Washington party.

Mrs. Barkley had issued an earlier warning that, "the size of the celebration tomorrow will depend on the size of the present you get me."

That was after the Veep, who will be 73 November 24, pleaded that heavy campaigning before the election and a bad cold this week kept him from giving the gift the attention it deserved. In fact, he said with feigned embarrassment, he just hadn't gotten around to it.

The celebration won't be a large one in spite of the gleaming new present. Barkley's son David and his wife, who live nearby, will be over for dinner tomorrow, but his two married daughters live in Washington and Mrs. Barkley's two teen-age daughters are both away at school.

The couple were enjoying the many, many cards, letters and telegrams of congratulations pouring into their Southern home, "The Angles," and they made it clear that the honeymoon by no means is ended.

"We are eagerly looking forward to our second year together, we have been so happy together that we feel our honeymoon hasn't even started yet," Mrs. Barkley said.

They disagreed mildly on only one point. The Veep is enjoying his vacation and looks forward rather reluctantly to the reconvening of Congress November 27. But his blue-eyed bride is eager to get back to Washington.

"I love every minute in the public eye. People are all so wonderful," she smiled.

A visiting British lay religious leader visiting Washington this week said the atom bomb was foretold in the Bible.

"I believe that Christ Himself was referring to the splitting of the atom in one of his prophesies," Kenneth de Courcy said. "In one place, in the Greek Biblical text, He is reported as using the word 'ouranon,' from which our present-day scientists have taken the name 'uranium.'

"Another of Christ's words in the Greek text is 'dunami,' from which comes the modern phrase 'dynamic power.'"

The chairman for Great Britain of the Christian Statesman Movement then said, "I am convinced that it is not far-fetched to translate Christ's words as: 'The powers of uranium shall be set in motion.'"

De Courcy was here to address a group of American religious leaders at American University.

Cathedral Window Will Be Dedicated

The last in a series of stained-glass windows devoted to good-neighbor countries will be installed in Washington Cathedral this week, honoring Canada.

Its installation high in the west wall of the north transept —between windows honoring England and South American republics—completes the glazing of this section of the cathedral.

Dedication of the 24-foot jewel-toned window will be held a week from Sunday at 3:30 p. m.

Ambassador Hume Wrong of Canada will speak, and the Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, dean of the cathedral, will make the dedication.

The Canadian flag as well as those of the 52 American States, island possessions, and territories, plus those of many other nations will be carried in one of the longest ecclesiastical processions ever to take place in the cathedral.

All British Commonwealth nations are expected to be represented in the procession. St. Albans upper-school students will carry the flags.

Members of the Canadian and all other diplomatic corps have been invited to attend, in addition to prominent United States officials. Others asked include the membership of the English Speaking Union, of the Canadian Club, all auxiliaries of the Washington Diocese, the Federated Bible Class organizations, and the National Cathedral Association.

The Canada window was designed, made, and is being installed by the stained glass studio of Reynolds, Francis, and Rohnstock of Boston, Mass.

The gift of an anonymous donor, the Canada window is a memorial to the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, who died in 1939. He served as dean of the cathedral from 1915 through 1936.

Pohick Church Plaque Will Be Dedicated

A plaque for Engineer Corps dead of all the Nation's wars will be dedicated Sunday at 11 a. m. at Pohick Church, the church of George Washington located on the Fort Belvoir reservation.

Fort Belvoir representatives and area religious leaders will gather at the all-military service, with Fort Belvoir Post Chaplain David E. Kinsler delivering the sermon.

Also to be presented to the church are exact duplicates of altar vessels of historical significance lost during the long history of the shrine. The vessels, a bread box and two wine cruets of sterling silver, have been purchased from donations in all of Fort Belvoir's chapels.

Maj. Gen. Douglas L. Weart, Fort Belvoir post commander, will make the presentations to the senior warden, and six members of the Engineer honor guard will act as ushers for the service.

Pohick Church, national shrine of the Order of the Purple Heart, was designed by the first President with the aid of George William Fairfax, at the time owner of the land now occupied by the Fort Belvoir reservation. Fairfax purchased the Belvoir pew on November 20, 1772. The plaque to Engineer dead is to be placed on that pew, the ceremony marking the 178th anniversary of the purchase.

D. C. Baptists To Hold 74th Convention

The seventy-fourth annual meeting of the District's Baptist Convention will be held Monday and Tuesday at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, 5671 Western ave. nw.

Mr. Burress

An estimated 550 delegates from the 34 churches of the convention are expected to attend the meetings which will give a roundup of the year's activities.

Seven new pastors will be introduced at Monday morning's session at which the Rev. Frank B. Burress, pastor of Fountain Memorial Church, will give the presidential message.

Election of new officers is scheduled for Tuesday at 4:15 p. m., after the convention sermon to be preached by the Rev. Henry J. Smith, pastor of North Washington Branch Church.

For New Building

Chinese Kick Off Fund Drive Sunday

The fifteenth anniversary of the Chinese Community Church will be observed Sunday with the launching of a $100,000 campaign for a new structure.

Dr. Shirkey

The program will begin at 3 p. m. at the church building, 1011 L st. nw., with a worship service. The principal speaker will be the Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, new pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Greetings will be brought by the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church and the Washington Federation of Churches president; Dr. Edward B. Willingham, pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church and president of the Washington Ministerial Union; Mrs. Ralph Dela Smith, chairman of the interdenominational board of the Chinese Community Church; and John Halko, First Baptist Church Sunday School teacher; chairman of the building fund drive, and others.

A reception and tea will follow the worship service.

Between 1932 and 1935 Washington church leaders began considering organization of a Chinese Community Church, which was formally organized April 15, 1935, at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. The Rev. C. C. Hung is pastor.

The Chinese Community Church conducts services in both Chinese and English. For many years its services were held Sunday afternoons at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. The new building will provide a much-needed auditorium for services; more classrooms for the Sunday school and language classes; more meeting facilities for all age groups, and enlarged social and recreational facilities.

Baltimore Archbishop Heads Catholic Welfare Conference

By The Associated Press

Archbishop Francis P. Keough of Baltimore was named chairman of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference yesterday.

Bishop Keough had been acting chairman of the board since Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati, died in April.

The NCWC is the national agency of the Catholic bishops in the United States. The administrative board coordinates national Catholic activities in educational, legal, youth, press and other fields.

Three new members were chosen for the board at the election. They are Archbishop John J. Mitty of San Francisco, who becomes chairman of the conference's youth department; Bishop Matthew F. Brady of Manchester, N. H., who will be chairman of the NCWC education department, and Archbishop Karl J. Alter of Cincinnati, who becomes vice-chairman and treasurer of the board.

Those re-elected are Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio, who heads the lay organizations department; Archbishop Patrick A. Accountants Hear Attack On Trade Acts

By S. Oliver Goodman

Trade associations were urged yesterday to join in a nonpartisan effort to improve trade practice legislation and its enforcement machinery.

More than 500 accountants, opening a conference yesterday at the Mayflower, heard a denunciation of present trade practice acts as "hopeless confusion."

Said J. Brooks Heckert, professor of accounting at Ohio State University: "Nobody can tell what is lawful or unlawful. The Robinson-Patman Act should be repealed. The Sherman and Clayton (antitrust) Acts should be clarified. And the Federal Trade Commission should be revitalized into a strong nonpartisan body with properly paid men of outstanding stature."

Industry, by its indifference, Heckert added, is itself to blame for the deterioration of the Federal Trade Commission.

Heckert was one of the speakers yesterday at the Mid-Atlantic Regional Cost Conference of the National Association of Cost Accountants. Delegates from five States and D. C. are attending the sessions which will conclude today.

The first day's session was highlighted last night by a dinner meeting at which guest speakers included Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, and Judge Edgar F. Goodrich, formerly of the Tax Appeals Court.

Today's session will study the problems that Government and industry face in accounting procedure of defense contracts and renegotiation of profits on defense business.

Pritchard will take over on December 1, when Shaw will go on a month's leave of absence after which Shaw will be formally retired under a new pension plan.

Carter Barron Rites Set Today at 3

The humble and the great of the Nation's Capital yesterday mourned the death of Carter T. Barron, 45-year-old Eastern division manager of Loew's Theaters, who succumbed to cancer Thursday at his home.

Representatives of the entertainment world and of the Government planned to attend his funeral at 3 p. m. today at All Saints Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase cir., as tributes and condolences arrived from over the Nation. Burial will be in Atlanta, Ga.

President Truman, who had expressed his sorrow at his press conference, was joined in eulogizing the life of Mr. Barron yesterday by William M. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

"I am inexpressibly shocked by the news of Carter's sudden death," Boyle said in a telegram to Mrs. Barron, whose illness for several years has confined her to the Barron home at 6661 Barnaby st. nw.

"I feel a deep personal loss, and the National Committee and the Democratic Party have lost a staunch friend and adviser. All of us who have worked with him so closely in the past years share your grief."

Chairman James E. Colliflower, of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade— on which Mr. Barron served—declared that "of this man it can truly be said he gave his life for civic service."

Executive Director Edward J. Keyes of the Community Chest disclosed Mr. Barron had been "working quietly with the advance gifts units in the early days of the 1951 Red Feather campaign."

He was "always available to the Red Feather organizations for advice in providing entertainment and arranging special productions to tell the story of the Community Chest," Keyes said.

Mr. Barron's office at Loew's Capitol Theater was deluged with telegrams and messages of sympathy from faraway cities. Among the senders were Clark Gable, Walter Pidgeon, George Murphy, Greer Garson, L. B. Mayer and Nicholas Schenck, president of the Loew's Theater chain.

Honorary pallbearers will be:

Dairy Group Seeks Milk Price Floor

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association yesterday disclosed it is planning to seek a Federal order setting minimum prices farmers may charge for milk supplied to Greater Washington.

The producer cooperative, which will be supplying 90 percent of the area's milk after the weekend, is planning to renew a year-old request for the Agriculture Department order.

The procedure requires at least 51 percent of the producers supplying the Washington market to apply for the order. Hearings are then held by the department and a formula is evolved for setting the price.

This usually involves costs of production, Bureau of Labor Statistics indices and other factors. The producers may withdraw from the order when they find it advantageous to do so.

The association held such an order from 1940 to April, 1947, and then requested that it be dissolved. It applied for another in 1949, but hasn't pressed for its adoption until now.

Yesterday, the Agriculture Department issued its November report on fluid milk and cream prices. The report showed Washington's retail price is 22 cents a quart, compared to an average of 20.8 cents in 24 major cities.

The average dealer buying price in more than 100 cities this month, the report showed, is $4.82 per hundredweight for a 3.5 percent butterfat content, while in the District, it is $6.13 for similar content.

Meanwhile, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District Director of public health, announced he is planning to recommend a return to the prewar ban on "outside" milk, thus ending a recent arrangement permitting local dairies to process "outside' milk for sale outside the city.

In Baltimore, Dr. Robert H. Riley, director of the State Health Department, said Maryland has no legal right to go into another State to inspect the source of milk being imported into Maryland.

Judge Rebukes 2 Film Couples In 'Wife-Swapping' Mixup

Mrs. William Hinshaw (left) and Jack Roberts

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16 (AP).—Two Hollywood couples involved in wife-swapping accusations were rebuked today by a judge who also convicted the husbands of contempt of court.

Jack Roberts, 37-year-old screen writer, was given a suspended sentence of five days in jail for failing to provide a proper accounting of his earnings to his estranged wife, actress Alice White, 43.

William Hinshaw, 34, studio musician, was sentenced to five days in jail, suspended on condition he pay certain school bills for support of his 5-year-old son, Christopher.

Superior Judge Elmer D. Doyle told Roberts: "If you can bring proof to this court that your wife is living with another man, I'll vacate the order for alimony."

Hinshaw and Miss White yesterday denied they were interested in each other, romantically, but accused their spouses, brunette Barbara Hinshaw, 25, and Roberts, of living together.

Judge Doyle told both couples: "I don't want any more trounble. You are acting more like children than adults."

He also ordered the Hinshaw boy placed in a neutral home with visitation rights granted each parent.

The wife-and-husband swapping accusations were hurled yesterday as the wives cited their spouses on charges of being in arrears on support.

Roberts pleaded yesterday: "Please tell them to leave us alone. Is it a crime to fall in love? Barbara and I were both separated at the time."

"They've been living adulterously, with my child around," Hinshaw, a French horn player, asserted.

Earth Belched: Potomac Flows Southeast

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The earth burped, yawned and swallowed long, and that's why the Potomac river flows southeast instead of northwest.

The movements were outlined to geologists in annual meeting here yesterday by Dr. Charles W. Carlston, of Oberlin College.

As he explained it:

In the beginning (not of the world but of eastern rivers) highlands lined the coast from New York to Southern Virginia. The drainage was northwest, to inland seas, in the Paleozoic area some 200 million years ago.

Then the earth moved (the burp), folding the highlands back westward and forming the Appalachian Mountains. Next, the earth yawned, a sheering movement of its surface which thrust up the land to the northwest, depressed the land to the southeast.

And finally the earth swallowed up its northwest-flowing streams, leveling off the eastern land, and tilting it gradually to the Atlantic coast. The water run-off became southeasterly, and the Potomac, Susquehanna, Delaware and other parallel rivers were born.

The whole change only took about 20 million years, according to the Carlston account.

Well, anyway, it's a moot matter to geologists, who have been told the Atlantic ocean swept in to the Appalachians, filled in the lowlands, and receded, leaving a natural southeasterly slant. If that were so, argued Dr. Carlston, geologists would be finding marine fossils up to the slopes of the mountains—which they haven't.

Hobby Show Has Profusion Of Exhibits

Washington's first "Golden Age Hobby Show" opened yesterday with a profusion of exhibits in the Commerce Department lobby.

"There must be as many hobbies as there are people," said an official, adding that there are some 400 Greater Washington exhibitors in the free four-day, 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. show.

The exhibits, testifying to the skills and active intellects of persons of 60 and up, are so numerous that they not only fill the lobby but spill over into an adjoining room and corridor.

In the array are collections of decoratively arranged buttons, postage stamps, seashells and theater programs.

Collection of Tools

A collection of old tools, shown by Elwood J. Way, features such objects as a frow—used in splitting siding until about 1830-1850 and for splitting shingles as late as 1900—and a scorper—used by coopers to smooth the inside of barrels and in making wooden bowls.

Dolls dressed in elaborate Biblical costumes; hand modeled figures and novelties, including "the original Easter Egg Tree"; stuffed toy animals, and intricate needlework are among feminine handicrafts displayed.

A four-panel screen designed from a patchwork quilt of the Revolutionary War period, is shown by Charles Kuhn. He used modern matchbook covers as a substitute for glazed chintz.

Drawing and Painting

Among the examples of drawing and painting is a group of coats of arms, painted by Mrs. Jules M. Watson, and a fan giving a family genealogy, by Clifton Yeomans. Drawings copied from eighteenth century French engravings are shown by Col. Frank A. Derouin, chairman of the program committee.

Tropical fish and parakeets are displayed by Grace P. Stabler, and an inlaid panel, "Gethsemane," containing 17 kinds of wood is displayed by George A. Simonds. Emile Gilliaert shows two Hepplewhite chairs, reproduced by hand in solid mahogany.

A feature of the show is an 8 p. m. program by each night by participants.

Synagogue Starts Sabbath Observance

The biennial convention of the United Synagogue of America, meeting at the Willard Hotel, yesterday began its sundown-to-sundown observance of the Sabbath.

"Boruch Atoh Adonoi . . . May the flames of the Sabbath lights enkindle in our hearts and minds the light of loyalty and the fire of faith in Thee, God," began the observance with the candle-lighting ceremony, or "licht benchen."

The ceremony, led by Mrs. Eugene Rosenblatt of the sponsoring sisterhood of Washington's Adas Israel Congregation, was followed by the Mincha, or twilight, service, and the Shabbat, or Sabbath, service.

The Sabbath brought to an end the workshops and seminars that have occupied the some 800 delegates, representing a half million persons, since the convention opened Wednesday.

The Sabbath observance will conclude at 4 p. m. today with the Oneg Shabbat, a new custom featuring young people's activities that has sprung up in Israel. A dinner for presidents of congregations will be held at 6 p. m., followed by a general session at 8:30 p. m. in the National Press Building auditorium.

The convention ends Sunday.

Last Day for Specimens In Diabetes Campaign

This is the last day member drugstores will serve as collection centers for specimens in the diabetic-detection campaign, Frederick C. Schultz, president of the District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association, announced yesterday.

The drive has brought in three times as many specimens as last year.

Assassination Attempt

Television Tackles Big Spot News Story

By John Crosby

TELEVISED NEWS PROGRAMS have matured a bit in the past year, and on November 1 came one of those news events that separate the boys from the men—the attempted assassination of President Truman.

Crosby

The divergent approaches of CBS and NBC to the story are characteristic of the networks. NBC on its most pretentious TV news program, Camel Caravan, had a slight edge in the pictorial department. CBS's Doug Edwards had a very large edge in the handling of the news.

Here are some of the facts Edwards brought out that NBC did not have and should have had. Both gunmen were Puerto Rican Nationalists. Collazo's statement: "We came here for the express purpose of killing the President." The fact that the President was awakened from his afternoon nap and watched the proceedings from his bedroom window. The fact that it was the sixth assassination attempt on a United States President with a brief history of the previous ones.

THE NBC SHOW, which comes on 15 minutes later—directly after the CBS show, in fact—not only missed all these fairly relevant facts but also indicated, in the words of its Washington correspondent, Robert McCormick, that it had "no clear picture yet of what happened . . . Collazo hasn't been very cooperative so far in explaining his motives . . . It's a mystery here."

Just why it should have been a mystery at 7:45, when all the facts were in, is a mystery to me. The probable reason is, again, the difference in approach. Doug Edwards and his producer, Don Hewitt, both former war correspondents, never bother with rehearsals. They spend all their time up to air time writing and rewriting so the news is as up to date as possible.

At NBC the emphasis is on showmanship, which isn't in itself a bad thing except when it is done at the expense of news values. John Cameron Swayze, who presides over the NBC show, memorizes his script and rolls it off in tones of unvarying portent, no matter what the news content is. Edwards consistently underplays, directing attention to the news rather than to himself. The Camel program seems put together like a variety show and once put together, NBC appears reluctant to tear it apart again—no matter who gets shot at.

THE NIGHT AFTER the shooting, for example, NBC devoted a lot of film footage to President Truman's walk (not too bad an idea on top of an assassination attempt), showed the President handing out Harmon trophies in his backyard and then proceeded to the inevitable fashion show. CBS, on the other hand, showed exclusive films of the fighting in Puerto Rico while Edwards gave a lot of background on the uprising and what it meant.

In other words, NBC gave the play to the personal element, President Truman, who is easier to dramatize. CBS, to the interpretive.

Well, you'll find a lot of newspaper editors who lean toward the NBC opinion and a lot that lean toward CBS's. I greatly prefer the CBS line because I feel it is the more responsible one. The interpretation of news in these bewildering times is a difficult assignment, not always an interesting one, but it is one of the gravest responsibilities a newsman has if he takes the profession of journalism at all seriously.

The guiding principle of Edwards and Hewitt is: "Never sacrifice news to pictures." This doesn't mean they totally lack dramatic sense. The night after Al Jolson died, they procured—after negotiating with what they describe as "about a million lawyers"—a shot from "The Jolson Story" of Larry Parks while Jolson's own voice sang "Mammy." It was more effective than a thousand editorials.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Democratic Version Of Republican Joke

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan tells this story about an incident in Senator Millikin's recent campaign for reelection.

In one small town where the Senator was scheduled to speak, he was introduced beforehand to a Presbyterian minister who was to give the invocation.

"I'm very happy to know you," said the Senator, "I believe I passed your church on the way to this hall."

"No," replied the preacher, "the one right down the street here is the United Presbyterian Church."

"Oh," persisted Millikin, "then yours must be the Presbyterian Church down near the railroad station."

"No," said the clergyman again, "that's the Reformed Presbyterian Church."

"I see," murmured the Senator, obviously confused. The kindly minister smiled and set him straight.

"Actually, Senator," he said, "the Presbyterian Church—like the Republican Party—is neither united nor reformed."

TURKEY DAY

There seems to be a great deal of confusion as to the date of Thanksgiving this year. And a good part of it stems from the fact that many widely circulated calendars list the date as November 30. A brief review of the Thanksgiving mixup might be in order.

For many years the President annually issued a proclamation setting the fourth or final Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day, and the Governors of the various States called on the people to observe it.

Franklin D. Roosevelt broke the tradition in 1939 and designated the third Thursday for the holiday in an effort to help businessmen by starting the Christmas shopping season a week earlier.

Some Governors went along with the change, others resisted, and there was great confusion. Congress finally ruled that, after 1941, the fourth Thursday would be Thanksgiving Day. And that's the way the matter stands at present.

This year, however, there are five Thursdays in November. And because so many folks have become accustomed to thinking of "fourth" as synonymous with "final," the misconception has even found its way into our calendars, and some of them show the final Thursday (30th) as the holiday.

It's not. The fourth Thursday—November 23d this year—is Thanksgiving Day.

"Fine 3-year-old watchdog, mixture beagle and terrier, wonderful with children." (Juniper 7-7588.)

"Long-haired 18-week-old kitten with definite personality and loud purring apparatus." (Appleton 1581.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. John Furneisen, 622 Westcott rd., Falls Church, Va.: You have a good memory. I didn't mention Telegraph rd. in my vacation letters because we missed it this trip. My reference to it last week was based on scores of previous visits to Michigan.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

How come you haven't mentioned the fact that a quip from your column is reprinted in the November Reader's Digest? Have they quoted you so often you're no longer impressed?

Josephine Wedemeyer,
7400 Rhode Island ave.,
College Park, Md.

Dear Miss Wedemeyer:

Heavens, no. The Reader's Digest has picked up stuff from this column perhaps a half-dozen times, and I've always been highly elated. But I figured that if you read the Digest you'd know about it, and if you don't read it you wouldn't care—so why should I bore you by mentioning it?

WHAT PRICE FAME!

Surveys consistently show that WTOP has more listeners than any other radio or television station in town. But, for a non-network station, WWDC puts up a terrific battle for its share of the local audience.

A few days ago, WWDC General Manager Ben Strouse took a few days off from his continuing battle to lure listeners away from top WTOP programs, and took a trip down to Williamsburg.

When he returned, Ben was so enthusiastic about what he'd seen that he started to describe his adventures to the cab driver who picked him up at the railroad station.

"Just think," he mused, "I walked along the same streets, and saw the same sights that must have been familiar to some of the greatest men in the earliest days of our history."

"Yeah," said the hacker, "I know what you mean. I took a trip down to Leesburg this summer and, just driving around, I got on a little old country road without realizing where I really was until I came right up to the place."

"You don't say," encouraged Strouse, playing the straight man's role to perfection. "And where did you find yourself?"

"At Arthur Godfrey's farm," said the driver reverently.

A member of the Board of Education charges that there's drinking and betting at high school football games. In my day, back in the scandalous '20's, the charge used to be "drinking and petting."

Lincoln's Goals Still Lie Ahead

By Drew Pearson

It will be four score and seven years ago tomorrow since Abraham Lincoln delivered his famed address dedicating a battlefield at Gettysburg. That address lasted only two minutes and followed a two-hour speech by orator Edward Everett.

PEARSON

The photographer was still loading his camera when Lincoln sat down, and when he did so there was only perfunctory applause. The Chicago Times described the speech as "flat and dishwatery," while Lincoln himself told his aides that he had been a failure.

However, those 10 sentences now serve as a guide to the hearts and consciences of free men throughout the world. Memorized by almost every school child in America, they have also been translated into French, Spanish, German, Turkish, Portuguese, Danish and Japanese. Thomas Masaryk, first President of Czechoslovakia, once called the Gettysburg Address "America's eternal message," and he was right. For it is just as timely today as it was on November 19, 1863.

At that time the Nation was involved in a war to free men from physical slavery. Today the country is fighting in Korea to free men from mental slavery. There is a little difference between slavery of the body and slavery of the mind. And, taking our cue from Lincoln, we are still dedicated to the proposition that all men are created free and equal. We are still testing whether a nation, so dedicated, can endure.

How well and how often we have dedicated ourselves to that unfinished work of the men who rest at Gettysburg is symbolized by the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and by the white crosses at Normandy and on Iwo Jima. We have not yet reached our goals but we have remained dedicated.

Real Progress

When Lincoln spoke at Gettysburg, only one Negro, Frederick Douglas, an escaped slave and adviser to Lincoln, had won national stature. Today the Nation has paid tribute to Ralph Bunche, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize; to Judge William Hastie, first Negro to sit on the U. S. Court of Appeals; to Congressman William Dawson, first Negro chairman of a congressional committee and a man respected by his Southern colleagues; to Walter Gordon, chairman of the California Adult Authority; to Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, first Negro to attain the rank of general.

When Lincoln spoke at Gettysburg, no Negro was permitted to own property. Today Negroes not only own property, but the Supreme Court has ruled against restrictive covenants. At the time of the Gettysburg Address, there was no free education for Negroes, except in missionary schools. But in World War II the number of Negroes with high-school education in the armed forces was 2,305,000, while the courts have ruled that Negroes may be admitted to many universities.

The Nation still has a long way to go to lift Negro schools to the level of white schools, but many Southern States, including Alabama, Mississippi and North Carolina, have made real progress.

On the other hand, here in the Capital of our Nation, supposed to be the heart of democracy and freedom, the "menace" of mixed audiences was considered so repugnant that the leading theater closed its doors rather than admit Negroes; while if Marian Anderson tried to drink a cup of coffee in most restaurants in the Nation's Capital she would be asked to leave.

We have come a long way since Lincoln's time, but we still have a long way to go.

When Lincoln dedicated the Nation to the "unfinished work" for which men died at Gettysburg, he referred not only to freedom for the Negro race, but to freedom for all men. Though Lincoln belonged to no church, he was deeply religious, and he added two words which were not in the original manuscript: . . . "That this Nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom . . ."

And were he alive today, Lincoln would be saddened at the religious intolerance existing in many parts of the Nation.

Where We Failed

When the enemy is at our neighbor's door, we join with him in battle. But during the humdrum, peaceful days between wars, we do not always hold out the helping hand to the same neighbor.

Perhaps that is what Lincoln meant by "the last full measure of devotion." Perhaps that is where we have failed.

We have realized that a world divided against itself, by communism, cannot long endure. But we have done little about the professional haters who defile our tradition that all men are created free and equal.

Nor do we realize that when a Nation gets too rich, too fat, too intent on luxury, it falls. The price of privilege is not merely to enjoy its lushness, but to share it with others. To stay on top in this world we have to work at it. And when we start worrying more about war profits than about war taxes, we're in danger.

This country will always rally to defend itself against a foreign enemy. But it's what we do to ourselves and among ourselves between wars that counts.

Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, can exist only as long as people care. If the individual's rights are to be protected, then the individual himself must work at the job of doing right.

Lincoln stated our goals for us plainly enough, but left it to us to figure out how to attain them. And were he living today in this dangerous atomic world, I think he might warn us that unless we learn how to get along with each other as individuals, not only our Government, but we, the people, may perish from the earth.
